The village wag after studying the name, R. D. Werschkul, on the meat market window, remarked that he didn't know what the conglomeration of letters in the last name meant, but he knew the first letters stood for "Rural Delivery."

Dr. Shearer autoed to Tillamook this morning and returned with the 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Shultz, of Meda. The little girl was operated on last week for appendicitis, and while she is still very sick, she is recovering as rapidly as could be expected.

A Narrow Escape for Mrs. Etwiler and Infant.

That the home of Joseph Etwiler at Oretown, was set on fire last Saturday morning is without a question of doubt. Who is guilty of the fiendish act is not an easy problem to solve and get evidence upon which a conviction could be secured. Kerosene was thrown on the sidewall along the stairway and ignited at about 3 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Etwiler and her 4-year-old daughter were sleeping up stairs and Mrs. Etwiler was awakened by the flash of light. Grabbing the little girl she hastened down stairs and by the use of a little water and a broom extinguished the flame before it had got any start.

Some think that the fire was started to burn Mrs. Etwiler and the child that it might destroy the evidence against Dewey Taylor who is now in jail awaiting the investigation of the court on a serious charge preferred by Mrs. Etwiler in behalf of the little girl. The sheriff and the district attorney, accompanied by a justice of the peace, visited the place Saturday forenoon and the odor of the kerosene was still discernable on the lath. A thorough investigation was made but it was impossible to get a clew sufficient to warrant the officers in making an arrest. Further clews are being followed and it is hoped that the perpetrator may be brought to justice.
