THE SHADOWS.

Do not borrow trouble and do not anticipate misfortunes. Were a man's sorrows and disquietudes summed up at the end of his life it would generally be found that he had suffered more from the apprehension of such evils as never happened to him than from those evils which had really befallen him.

LOYAL TO AMERICA.

So much emphasis has been laid upon the hyphen lately that it should not be overlooked that the German spy, Ignatus T. T. Lincoln, who had escaped from custody in New York, has been recaptured through information furnished the authorities by several naturalized Germans.

It is the most natural thing in the world that those of German descent should sympathize with Germany in her trouble, but when the country of their adoption is dragged in, in one way or another, the overwhelming percentage of them are going to be loyal to its joys and their adopted country. Both Americans in American and Germans in Germany might as well understand that now.

SOME WAR FIGURES.

The European war continues and the war debt to be inherited by future generations is rising mountain high. Premier Asquith of Great Britain owns up that the war is costing John Bull twenty-two millions of dollars every day, and the house of commons has voted the government a credit of $2,100,000,000 with which to carry on the war. This money will run the government until the last of May. The total cost of the war for England in 1915 and 1916 to date is $6,677,000,000, and there is no telling what the total cost will be at the end of the conflict.

Germany needs money for the war and is now endeavoring to raise $2,000,000,000 of new revenue by means of taxation.

After the Franco-Russian war, France was obliged to pay Germany an indemnity of one billion dollars. Of this amount $200,000,000 in gold was deposited in the subterranean chambers near Spandau, and each year there has added to this one million dollars in gold. This was the nest egg for the next war, and as the next war is here, it is presumed that the war chest has been smashed and its contents distributed.

THE SLAB CREEK SAGE SAYS

If a woman is homely she tries to persuade herself that she has a classic face

Nowadays we hear more about the shiftless son-in-law than about the prodigal son.

We never have much use for people who are smarter than we are.

It takes a silly woman to make a fool of a smart man.

Folly and failure roost on the same perch.

Great men have many friends—and many more enemies.

Wisconsin.

Wisconsin has from time to time been an annex of various states. After Ohio was admitted to the union, Wisconsin from 1805 to 1809 formed a part of Indiana territory. From 1809 to 1818 Wisconsin was embraced in the territory of Illinois. When Illinois became a state all the country north of it, including Wisconsin, was joined to Michigan. After more than forty years of shifting, Wisconsin was admitted into the Union with her present boundaries in 1848.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

What Held Her.

Dinah Snow was a colored cook in the home of Smith. One morning on going to the kitchen Mrs. Smith noticed that Dinah looked as if she had been tangled up with a road roller.

"Why, Dinah," exclaimed she, "what in the world has happened to you?"

"Was me husban'," explained Dinah. "He done went an' beat me ag'in, an' jes' fo' nothin' too."

"Again!" cried Mrs. Smith, with increasing wonder "Is he in the habit of beating you? Why don't you have him arrested?"

"Been thinkin' of it several times, missy," was the startling rejoinder of Dinah, "but I hain't nebah had no money to pay his fine."—Exchange.

Gypsies And Death.

The custom of placing the property of the dead in their graves has always been followed by the true Romany gypsies. It is due to some old tradition of ill luck attending the possession of an article whose former owner is gone, and much valuable property is buried in this belief. There is also a sentiment among gypsies against the possession of anything that has belonged to a dead person, because it serves to remind the living of the departed and inspire in them a dread of death. The custom of burying their property with gypsy dead dates from the earliest history of the Romany tribes.

In a Bad Way.

"Is he hard up?"
"I should say so. He can't even get credit for his good intentions."—Judge.

Less Time.

"In what month do ladies talk the least?"
"In February."—Exchange.

No News.

"They tell me your wife is one of the cleverest women in town."
"So I hear."—Judge.

Passports.

Passports are a very ancient institution. Some of the old monkish chroniclers mention as an achievement on the part of King Canute that he obtained free passes for his subjects through various continental countries, on their pilgrimages to the shrines of the Apostles Peter and Paul at Rome. Each pilgrim was furnished with a document in the nature of a passport called "Tracturia de Itinere Peragente." Hall in his "Chronicle" makes reference to a system of passports in the time of Edward IV. and the enforcement of this system is known to have been very strict in the reigns of Elizabeth and James.—London Chronicle.

The Rhodum Sidus.

An amusing story told by Hood describes how a country nurseryman made a large sum out of sales of a simple little flower which he sold under the name of the Rhodum sidus. This charming name proved quite an attraction to the ladies, and the flower became the rage of the season. It was one of those freaks of fashion for which there is no accounting. At length a botanist who found that the plant was not an uncommon weed requested to know where the nurseryman got the name from. He elicited the following reply: "I found this flower in the road beside us, so christened it the Rhodum sidus."

First Colonial Assembly.

The first legislative assembly that ever met in America was at Jamestown, Va. Governor Yeardley, feeling that the colonists should "have a hand in the governing of themselves," to use his own language, called the assembly together at Jamestown July 30, 1619. It consisted of the governor, council and "burgesses," as they were called, chosen from the various plantations. The laws passed by this body had to be ratified in England; but, in turn, the orders from London were not binding unless ratified by the colonial assembly. In 1621 these privileges were embodied in a written constitution, the first of the kind in America.—New York American.

Fining English Servants in 1680.

Nan Newton, for breaking a teapot in Phill's chamber, 2s. 6d.

Richard Knight, for pride and slighting, 2s. 6d.

William Hetherington, for not being ready to go to church three Sundays, 10 shillings.

Thomas Birdall, for being at Nuneaton from morning to night, 5 shillings.

Cook, dead drunk, 10 shillings.

Anne Adams to be washmaid at Lady day. She went away the 29th of June for being wanton and careless. She lost five pairs of sheets and five pillowbeers, for which my wife made her pay £1.—Diary of Sir Richard Newdigate.

Animal Peculiarities.

All animals, hens included, have peculiarities, and to obtain the best results in working with them we must take this fact into consideration. Not only is it true that each class of animals has its peculiarities, but individuals in the same class have their distinctive traits. To illustrate this take for example two horses. One is a heavy work horse, and when you speak to him it is quite awhile before he obeys. Yet he may be as willing and obedient as the other horse, which is of driving stock and quick in its thoughts and actions. In fact, it is wrong to both to drive such horses together.—Farm and Fireside.
