PREPARING FOR BIG CONVENTION.

As the time set for the Republican national convention draws near there is the liveliest speculation as to who will be the man picked to make the fight against Woodrow Wilson. While there may be some doubt as to the Republican nominee, it seems to be pretty well assured that President Wilson will be tendered the renomination when the Democratic delegates assemble at St. Louis.

The Republican delegates will convene in the Coliseum in Chicago on June 7. Already the hotels are preparing for a great crowd. Soon the booms of favorite sons will re-echo through the corridors. While there are some men who look to have a big lead in the race for the nomination, some of the wisecracks are saying this is the year for a dark horse. There never was a convention in which, a few hours before the delegates met, there wasn't some talk of a dark horse. That's all there was—talk. The dark horse seldom looms dangerous when the balloting begins.

But that this year the race is more open than in any convention in recent years is evidenced by the statement of Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee, who declared that the candidate "will be born in the convention."

The seating arrangement of the Coliseum will be much the same as it was last year, except that a thousand or more chairs are to be crowded in. The architect has blueprints showing that the seating capacity will be 12,500.

Alphabetically some of the Republican possibilities are as follows:

Borah, William E., of Idaho.
Brumbaugh, Martin G., of Pennsylvania.

Burton, Theodore E., of Ohio.
Cummins, Albert B., of Iowa.
Estabrook, Henry D., of New York.
Fairbanks, Charles W., of Indiana.
Hughes, Charles E., of New York.
La Follett, Robert M., of Wisconsin.
Mann, James R., of Wisconsin.
McCall, Samuel W., of Massachusetts.
Roosevelt, Theodore, of New York.
Root, Elihu, of New York.

Sherman, Lawrence V., of Illinois.
Weeks, John W., of Massachusetts.
Roosevelt has been president and Fairbanks has been vice president. Hughes has been governor of New York and is associate justice of the supreme court. Mann is the leader of the minority in the house of representatives. Brumbaugh and McCall are governors of their states. Borah, Cummins, La Follette and Weeks are senators, and Fairbanks and Root have been so. McCall has had long experience in the house of representatives.

United States Senator Warren G. Harding, of Ohio, will be temporary chairman of the convention.—Am. Press.
