CLOVERDALE LODGE VISITED BY BIG GUNS

Grand Master Westbrood and Grand Conductor Wead Here for the Evening.

Last evening the Oddfellows and Rebekahs were entertained by Grand Master Westbrood and Grand Conductor Wead, of Portland. A large number of the members of the lodge were present and several visitors from Tillamook and Beaver were among the guests.

A special meeting of the Oddfellows was first held and the visiting officers were listened to with marked interest, after which the Rebekahs held their regular meeting and initiated three candidates. The grand officers complimented the Rebekahs for their excellent work.

After the meetings were closed a spread was had and it was at the early hour of 1 o'clock this morning before all had been served. The meeting was a grand success and all report having had an exceptionally enjoyable time.

"Sissies and Mollecoddles."

This is the title of a lecture to be delivered in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening by Rev. Snider, of Pendleton.

Rev. Snider occupied the pulpit last Sunday evening with a sermon and it was one of the best the people have listened to for some time. His delivery is good and what he has to say he delivers straight from the shoulder with such earnestness that you have no reason to doubt his sincerity.

His lecture Sunday evening, August 6th, "Sissies and Mollecoddles" will be worth making a special effort to hear. He requests a full house and we believe the people will turn out to show him that his request is granted. There is no charge and all are invited, especially the young people.

Made Short Stay Here.

Cloverdale was thrown into considerable excitement last Thursday afternoon when William Morrison, the colored man, leisurely walked into town. Morrison had been sent to the county jail for prowling around in the night time and as he was thought to be demented an examination was made of his condition and he was taken to Salem for treatment. While at Salem he took leave of absence on Wednesday and hiked to Cloverdale. Sheriff Crenshaw came over Friday afternoon and took Morrison to Tillamook, where he was met by the Salem officials and escorted back. Morrison is a husky negro 35 years old, and having the habit of prowling around nights the citizens here are more less afraid of him, especially the women folk. A demented negro is not the safest creature to have around and it is hoped Cloverdale is rid of him for all time.

Have Your Guests Mentioned.

It is impossible for any newspaper to get the names of all visitors to his locality. Let us tip you off a sensible suggestion. When you have a guest visiting you from out of town kindly inform the Courier so that it can mention the fact. Your guests will appreciate it, and their home paper will copy it, thus more than ever make them feel as though they had not been neglected. A letter, postal card or a telephone message will do the trick. Don't wait until the paper has been printed and then get a grouch because the paper did not mention the fact that you had visitors. The Courier is printed on Thursday afternoons and we can handle any item up to Thursday noon. Paste this in your hat and always feel that you are doing the Courier and your guests a favor when you send in an item of this kind.

A Monorail Ride.

Buttinsky, who heard some traveling men talking about the monorail, adopted his usual tactics. "I rode on one of those once," he piped in. "Rode on what?" "A single rail." "I'll bet you did," replied one of the drummers, "and I'll also bet there was a man carrying each end of the rail." —Judge.

It is speculation if you happen to win, but it is gambling if you lose.

Crossing the Channel.
What landing at Sandwich was like in 1533 we learn from Hubertus, the envoy of the Palsgrave Frederick to Henry VIII., whose story is given in Mrs. Henry Cust's "Gentlemen Errant." Hubertus was detained for a week at Culais by stormy weather and had a terrible time when he finally hired a ship and crossed. A young Englishman compelled the sailors to do their duty by ropes' ends and threats of death, and taught Hubertus, who was "midding seasick," to pump out the water, which he did "till at the break of morning the winds fell, and we saw the mountains of England spread out before us." They found themselves off Sandwich (that mountainous district) and were taken off the ship in small boats and carried "on neck or back" to land.—London Chronicle.

The Moth and the Flame.
A naturalist states that a moth—and for that matter many other insects—will fly toward a flame for the same reason that a plant seeks the light. Insects, it seems, move in the direction of the light rays that fall upon them. But the light must be of considerable intensity to produce a marked result. Toward a feeble glare the insect would move but leisurely, but in the case of a concentrated light like the flame of a candle or lamp the insect travels with great rapidity to its death.

Tiger Sharks.
When a Hawaiian sees a shark near the surface with eyes which shine red, as though they had red glass in them, he will not go in the water or even on the water or if he is on the water he will get to shore, for the red eyed fish is the tiger shark, and it does not hesitate to attack. They will not only attack a man in the water, but they will follow a fisherman in a canoe after he has taken a lot of fish aboard, and it is said they will attack and overturn a canoe if they are very hungry.
Men who know fish do not want to have anything to do with the tiger shark.
A shark does not turn on its back to bite, as is the common opinion of those who have not lived near shark infested waters. It turns on its side and when in this position can travel almost as fast and handle itself almost as well as when it is in its natural position.—Honolulu Star.
