THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 1916

Fifty-four citizens of the Cloverdale voting precinct voted to prohibit the shipping of booze into Oregon, while forty-four said "let 'er come."

The United States government still has unclaimed farms and woodlots for millions of its sons and daughters. Secretary Lane says that more than two hundred and fifty million acres of public land remain to be taken over by homesteaders.

Even in these times of soaring prices $6150 is a prodigious price to pay for a cow. Langwater Dairymaid, a Guernsey, brought her owner that amount at a Massachusetts auction sale of fancy stock the other day. It is said to be a thousand dollars more than the highest price ever before paid for a cow.

The vote to prohibit cattle running at large in this precinct carried 101 to 6. Now that we have a law prohibiting the running at large of stock it should be enforced, and enforced right to the letter. Sentiment has no place in the enforcement of any law, and regardless of who owns the stock, they should be compelled to keep them from running at large on the highway.

If for no other reason, we are constrained to compliment the voters in this district on their vote against the brewers' amendment. Sixty-four by their suffrage last Tuesday proclaimed they were beyond being tricked into voting for a law that had more jokers in it than all the other propositions ever put before the intelligent voters of any community. Sentiment enters but slightly in the wet and dry movement now days. It is simply a question of economic waste. Thirty-nine in this district, however, did not look at it from that standpoint.

A German newspaper prints an editorial in which it says that Germany desires peace. Germany holds no hatred toward France, it says, nor any ill-will against Great Britain. This is quite contrary to the general impression that has prevailed. Perhaps the newspaper in question reflects the sentiments of the non-militaristic class in Germany. It would seem to be the truth. It would appear that peace is desired by the people of all the warring nations, but that the army and navy crowd insist that the awful slaughter of human life go on. Their thirst for blood has not been satisfied.

Boys' Stilts Free!

Stilts are all the rage. We have a pair for every boy in the valley and we want every boy to have a pair.

Come into the store and see them, also learn how you can be a possessor of a pair of these nicely painted and practically arranged step stilts.

Do not wait until the other boys get ahead of you but come to the store right away.

THE SLAB CREEK SAGE SAYS

At last we have discovered why a woman doesn't keep a secret. She is afraid that some other woman will tell it first.

A small boy's ideal memorial window is one in front of a candy store.

Flatter a man if you want him to have implicit faith in your judgement.

Two men may live together in peace and harmony, but no two women can do it.

An optimist is a man who invests in a gold brick every time the opportunity presents itself.

If all tombstones told the truth his satanic majesty would have a fire sale and go out of business.

Three things that never become rusty—the money of the charitable, the nails in a collector's shoes and a thoughtless woman's tongue.

No man ever gets discouraged in trying to live without labor.

It takes a divorce lawyer to see the silver lining in a domestic cloud.

Lots of men have cause to rejoice because they don't get what they want.

And most people who know but little always want to tell just a little more.

The man who is determined to make a fool of himself has many opportunities thrust upon him.

While some of us have more ups and downs in this world than others, we'll all be on a dead level sooner or later.

From a toper's side of view a soft drink is synonymous with hard luck.

We all have a soft spot in our heads at birth—and some always retain it.

Bald heads don't always generate bare facts.

Patience isn't necessarily a virtue; more often it's a necessity.

Too many married men who have family burdens to bear think it's up to them to come home loaded every night.

During the courtship, when a young man gazes into a girl's soulful eyes and admires her dimples, he's apt to overlook her chin.

The board of strategy is the kind you get at a poor boarding house.
