He Must Have Had Feet Like a Table.

The account by Mr. Peaslee of how Link Peters hunted partridges, printed in the Companion of October 7, 1915, reminded a reader of a hunting "yarn" that used to be told back in the hills of West Virginia.

A young hunter went up into the hills to "try his luck." There was one "point" in the hills almost perfectly round, and the soil was so loose and dry that it was easily marked by the feet of a passing animal. The hunter saw turkey tracks the moment he reached the point, and followed them. They circled and recircled the point, and still no turkey appeared. The tracks were fresh, too.

There's only one thing about it! That turkey just watches my tracks and keeps following just in back of me," thought the young man. Accordingly he took off his shoes, put them on backward, and so went round the point and got the baffled tuakey!

Expensive Language.

Says a contributor to a New York paper: Ezra is a strictly honest but rather sharp Vermont blacksmith. A neighbor drove into his yard the other morning and asked him if he thought his carriage was worth repairing. The old man looked it over critically, and said he guessed the job was "wuth doin." When the bill was sent the first item read:

Peekin' and lookin'.....07

A few days later a New York man sent his limousine to a garage to see if it were in prime condition, which it proved to be. This is the bill rendered:

For examination of car.....$7.00

As near as I can figure, the difference between the two bills is one of diction.

True To Life.

Photographer (to young man)—It will make a better picture if you put your hand on on your father's shoulder.

Father—H'm! It would make a more natural picture if he put his hand into my pocket.

The Bank Is Safer Than the Stove.

SCARCELY a week goes by that the newspapers don't print a story of some foolish housewife who thoughtlessly started a fire in the stove where she had stored away the savings of a lifetime. Money placed in a stove or in a teapot or under a carpet does not draw interest. It is not safe from thieves. It is not safe from fire. Money deposited in a bank draws interest. The steel vaults in our bank are impervious to fire and thieves. Bank your money with us.
