BIG MAN FOR CLOVERDALE

The last printing office he worked in was that of the Chicago Evening Post at its inception in 1890, and it was while in the employ of that paper that he solved the great problem of life and decided to devote the remainder of his days to the cause of religion and in the service of God.

It was about a quarter of a century ago that, as he himself says, he solved that problem—the question of his eternal salvation—in the old Pacific Garden Mission. A short time before he had been in a saloon on Desplaines street where he took a look into a mirror and surveyed his reflection long and earnestly. He turned around and looked at the other fellows in the barroom, and, to use his own words, "I looked worse than any of them. I walked out, like Abraham—not knowing whither I went."

Mr. McVeigh solved several important questions that night, but the most important of all, the salvation of his soul, was finally and completely settled when he walked into the Pacific Garden Mission and called upon God in pursuance of the scriptural promise: "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved".

At last the parting of the ways had come and from that day forth Joseph McVeigh was an altered man. He decided to embrace the life of a minister of the gospel and enter the field of evangelism. He began his studies with that end in view at the Moody Bible Institute, was ordained a minister by the Chicago Presbytery of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in 1900, but he had been preaching for seven years previous to that time.

The career of Rev. Joseph A. McVeigh as an evangelist has been an eminently successful one. Naturally eloquent, the master of a splendid vocabulary, which he acquired in the practice of his profession as a printer, which Horace Greeley declared to be better than a classical education, a man with a striking personality with a rich store of experience and a wondrous fund of anecdote, consisting mostly of personal experiences, kindly of manner, persuasive in tone, he numbers his converts to religion by hundreds everywhere he goes.

It is expected that Rev. McVeigh will be here to begin his pastorate January 1.

COURTESY.

How sweet and gracious, even in common speech, is that fine sense which men call courtesy! Wholesome as air and genial as the light, Welcome in every clime as breath of flowers, It transmutes aliens into trusting friends And gives its owner passport round the globe.

—James T. Fields.

There's a Difference in Batting.

Old Dan Brouters, fat and comfortable, gazes at the modern games and shakes his head. "They don't ring off the bats the way they used to do," says the old warrior—and they don't. Not the way Dan used to punch them, anyhow. When Brouters was in his prime the pitchers didn't try fancy curves or change of pace against him. They just threw him a straight ball, shut their eyes and prayed.

Mother's Doll Story

Molly Visits Gobble Gobble

Once upon a time a nice wax doll by the name of Molly went to the country with her mamma.

They were visiting a lovely big farm. So one morning Molly got up very early and went out in the barnyard to see a great big turkey by the name of Gobble Gobble.

Now, Gobble Gobble was getting the best of care, for he was the bird that had been picked out for the Thanksgiving dinner. Of course to help eat this good dinner was why Molly and her mamma had gone to the farm.

"Hello, Gobble, Gobble," said Molly, going straight up to the big turkey.

"Good morning, Wax Doll," Gobble Gobble answered, spreading his broad wings and making his neck red.

Then he did the strangest thing. He scratched his wings along in the dirt and made a quick circle right around Molly, for she wore a beautiful red dress, you see, and turkeys do not like anything red. They seem to want nothing around as red as their own necks.

When he kept coming nearer and nearer Molly got quite frightened, but when Gobble Gobble came right at her she turned and ran like anything. Gobble Gobble chased her till at last she had to run right up on to a big wood pile. Here she sat, throwing sticks of wood at Gobble Gobble till her mamma came and chased him away and took Molly safely into the house.

Garments For Children.

When making garments for growing children which you intend to let down stitch the hem with eighty or ninety thread on the machine. This is easily ripped out and does not leave a heavy line of holes. Another way is to make a wide hem and take up a large tuck on the underside. This can be taken out when the garment needs to be lengthened.

The Fairy Ship.

There's a strange ship in the bay,
So they say;
She has come from Fairyland,
Where the mermaids, hand in hand,
Sing upon a coral strand
All the day.

All her masts are made of gold,
So I'm told,
And she flies pure silken sails,
And her flags are peacocks' tails,
And she has the weirdest bales
In the hold.

There are fairies not a few
In her crew,
And tomorrow she'll be far
Out across the southern bar,
Where the flying fishes are
In the blue.

—St. Nicholas

Nobody's Business.

Under the impression that it is "nobody's business," young people are apt to take chances with their reputations which the older persons know are fatal.

The thoughtlessness of youth is responsible for many escapades which are entered into innocently, but end most disastrously.

Young man or young woman, is not what you do the business of your parents, your relatives and your friends?

Remember each-in turn is affected by your actions.

Whatever you do reflects on those with whom you have daily contact.

If not for your peace of mind, you should keep yourself under control for the sake of those who love you.

One rash act may tear down a reputation you have been your young life in building
