THE SILO WAY.

The Nestucca Valley Bank and a Plan to Secure a Silo

Of late there has been more or less said about the benefits of the silo to the dairyman. Those who have used the silo for the past two or three seasons are loud in the praise of the silo way. Silos are not expensive structures and there are those who claim that enough can be saved the first season to pay for the erection of one.

The greatest advantage, it is claimed, is the fact that they may be filled any time, hence there is no danger of a spoiled hay crop on account of rain during harvest time. Then again a great deal of material can be used in the silo that otherwise could not be fed to the cattle. In short, the story is told that the silo way is the only way.

Wherever an opportunity has occurred to the advantage of the farmer there has always been the far seeing man who has readily come forward with the opportunity. In many places the banks have financed farmers to secure better grade cattle. In the country where corn is in abundance the bankers have financed the farmer so that he could secure hogs to convert the surplus corn into cash.

After the most searching investigation the Nestucca Valley Bank has arrived at the conclusion that it would be a most advantageous plan for the ranchers in the Nestucca Valley to build silos, and they have also arrived at a plan where they can be of assistance to the ranchers desiring to build silos. The bank advises the Courier that they will loan to ranchers for the purpose of building silos what money they may need for one year at 6 per cent interest. They will also assist as far as desired the ranchers in securing the best prices on materials and to perform such other services as possible in the plans, advice, etc.

We would advise any reader of the Courier who is desirous of building a silo to have a talk with the bank and get full details of the financial way to get into the silo way.

If milk is heated until lukewarm, then chilled suddenly, there will be much more cream. The skin which will form should be removed by straining through muslin.

If copper pans are not very carefully cleaned there is danger that they may poison the food cooked in them.

Salt dissolved in alcohol will often remove grease spots from clothing.

Don't Tempt the Thief!

WHEN your money is in the bank it is safe from pick-pockets and burglars. A man who is known to carry a large sum of money on his person soon is marked as prey by the thief. None of the big men of the country carry large sums of money about. Don't tempt the thief. It may cost you not only your money, but your life. Bank your money with us.
