THURSDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1917.

Buy a Liberty Bond and go to sleep with a clear conscience.

After the war is over watch the Liberty Bonds advance in price.

Speakers have told us of the reason why Uncle Sam was urging the citizenry to buy Liberty Loan Bonds. Among the most prominent reason was that it showed loyalty to the government. This is all very true and it shows that the hearts of the American people are in the right place. But there is an added good reason and one we think of vital importance. We can see that this reason is reasonable when we realize that Uncle Sam could have sold these bonds to the banks of New York and the east with less trouble and expense. Then you ask why he did not do it. The reason is obvious. At all times the United States is looking far into the future. The government realizes that the time is coming when the war will close, then what? The question is many times asked what will the times be when the war ends. This is just the point. Uncle Sam would like to see $50 of the coin of the realm in the hands of each and every individual citizen. With this amount of money scattered throughout the country hard times or a panic of any description could not occur. If each individual has a Liberty Loan Bond of $50 it can be easily converted into gold or currency and business will progress uninterrupted when the word has been heralded over the wires that peace again reigns supreme over the entire world. Two days yet remain in which to buy a Liberty Loan Bond.

BUNK PATRIOTS.

Berton Bruley tells us in a few words his mind of a bunk patriot:

"I prefer the slacker to the bunk patriot.

"For at least the slacker is frankly dodging his duty, while the bunk patriot is trying to get by with loud promise and no performance.

"Who is the bunk patriot?

"He is the corner grocer who drapes the flag all over the front of his shop and puts up his prices 50 per cent, 'on account of the war,' the restaurant keeper who serves Hoover's war rations at enhanced schedules; the business man who subscribes to two Liberty bonds and gets it back immediately with 200 per cent added from the public he is supposed to serve; the landlord who sends out notices of increased rents on paper with an embossed flag in the corner.

"He is the employer who talks about the 'disloyal and unpatriotic workman' that strikes for another dollar a day to meet the increased cost of living due to the activities of other bunk patriots, and in the next breath denounces the confiscatory and socialistic policy of taking ten per cent of the extra war profits to carry on the war.

"He is the banker, the financier, the money lender who cheers for our boys in khaki and forecloses notes and mortgages on the families they have left behind.

"He is any and every member of the tribe of 'I'll-get-mine'—and when the real patriots who are suffering and sacrificing and toiling and fighting to win the war for democracy and decency find time to attend to him he's going to 'get his' with compound interest and a bonus. When that glad period arrives the rest of us will be present and yell—

"Hit him again, he has no friends!"
