 This is the last issue of the Courier. We again take the opportunity of thanking patrons for their liberal patronage. The editor will remain in Cloverdale for a short time to close up all accounts. We ask those who have accounts against the Courier or its publisher to present them as soon as possible. It will be a splendid favor if those who are indebted for the Courier will come in and settle, avoiding the necessity of sending out a large number of statements of small accounts.
 A very serious accident occurred on the road between Cloverdale and Pacific City Tuesday afternoon. H. H. Bonnie and his wife, who reside north of Woodburn, were driving their automobile coming from Pacific City when they met and attempted to pass a loaded wagon. The fern hides the edge of the embankment at this place and Mr. Bonnie drove out too far. His machine rolled down the embankment, breaking his shoulder blade and two ribs. Mrs. Bonnie was not seriously injured although she was considerable bruised and shaken up. They were brought to the hospital at this place where Dr. LeFevre attended them and made them as comfortable as possible.
 Moving will soon be in order in Cloverdale. Mrs. Hunter will start the procession by moving into the cottage on the hill owned by Mrs. Landingham. Mr. Spaulding will then move into his own place, formerly occupied by Mrs. Hunter. Mr. Wade will follow by moving into the cottage occupied by Mr. Spaulding and Dr. George will then move into his place that was occupied by Mr. Wade. A little later Druggist High will vacate the Chas. Ray home by moving into his own house and the Chas. Ray home will be occupied by Lester Ray, who will look after the ranch in the future. George Wells will then move to the Lester Ray ranch which he has leased. The Taylor family expect to move next week to Newberg and possibly all families will then be settled for the winter.

ITALY HAD FIRST PAWNSHOP

From That Country the System Gradually Spread Over the Rest of the Civilized World.
 The French call them monts-de-piete, but no satisfactory explanation for this nomenclature is forthcoming. The establishment of municipal pawnshops in France was attended with more difficulty than was the case in other countries.
 It is from Italy that the idea of municipal pawnshops spread over the rest of Europe. A municipal pawnshop was set up in Madrid in the year 1705, when a priest with very little capital opened up as an "uncle." The system was tried at Avignon in 1577, but it was not until the year 1777 that Paris itself was provided with a mont-de-piete. The national assembly upset the monopoly and the business passed into private hands. The extortions of the pawnbrokers in time led, however, to a demand for the re-establishment of the governmental institutions. In 1806 Napoleon re-established the monopoly, regulating it by laws that are still in force. The interest charged amounts to about 7 per cent.
 In Paris the mont-de-piete is in effect a department of the administration, but in the provinces it is a municipal monopoly.

Wrist Watches Afloat.

Wrist watches at sea, with their luminous dials, are at once a convenience, a safeguard and a peril. You can tell the time without tearing your clothes to pieces or going to a light. When you walk along the deck at night you can hold your forearm so that the dial glows in the sight of all who are passing along the deck and thus prevent collisions. If you don't play up your wrist watch, you are supposed to whistle "sweet and low" in the dark as you pass along. But if you are not passing along the deck, only lingering along the deck rail, and are fortunate in having one of the few women who are crossing as your companion in that lingering, your luminous dial at rest on the deck rail is apt to wreck the wonderful sense of seclusion that darkened decks give these war times. One heartless patrol a trip or two ago stepped to the rail and asked a dismayed subaltern not to have his wrist watch "quite so far around," whatever that meant, because it might be detected by a submarine.—Nelson Collins in the Century Magazine.

"The Fool Hath Said."

This is a message from one who knows—Coningsby Dawson—to those who do not realize. It is a message direct from the trenches in France by a soldier and writer to us behind the lines. He says:
 "Life has swung back to a primitive decision since the war commenced. The decision is the same for both men and nations. They can choose the world or achieve their own souls. They can cast mercenary lots for the raiment of a crucified righteousness or take up their martyrdom as disciples. Those men and nations who have been disciples together can scarcely fail to remain friends when the tragedy is ended. What the fool says in his heart at this present moment is not of any lasting importance."—Red Cross Magazine.

HISTORY WROUGHT IN STONE

Marvels of French Architecture Which the Uncivilized Hordes of Germany Would Destroy.

In architecture France is supreme. It well may be said that without France there would have been no Gothic architecture. The cathedrals of France are absolutely unrivaled, says Cass Gilbert in the World's Work. One has only to mention the names of Notre Dame de Paris, Bourges, Reims, Chartres, Rouen, Amiens, Beauvais and Coutances to bring up memories of miracles of creative design which no words can fittingly characterize or describe.

Wonders of constructive ingenuity as they are, they have a yet more supreme significance as evidence of the refinement and taste of a people instinct with emotion and ennobled by idealism in its most exalted phase. These great buildings give expression to the spiritual aspirations of a great people.

They are constructions of superb scale and fascinating beauty, embellished by tracery and arabesque, carving and inlay, stained glass, tapestry, bronze and iron of marvelous craftsmanship and exquisite design. They are the product of a thousand years of faultless taste, the contribution of innumerable thousands of craftsmen devoted to the glory of God and the love of France. And it is this glorious nation that the hordes of Germany would destroy.

Within Sound of the Guns.

A new sound arose in the darkness, a sound which held for me a thrill as vital and incomparably more alluring than the hint of distant battle. It rose slowly, a rich, mellow undulation, which stirred every fiber, and then quavered, descended and broke off. We stood motionless, listening with all our ears, and again it came, unmistakably, from the depths of the misty woods. My companion snailed at me in triumph. His first surprise had come off promptly, even ahead of time, for it was only now growing dusk. We could see in imagination the drooped tail, the hollow-cheeked muzzle raised skyward—a wolf uttering that cry which of all sounds is most symbolic of the northern wilderness; an hurlement plaintif et lugubre. I could not believe my ears, that here in the heart of France, within sound of the guns at the front, I had heard the voice of a wild wolf.—William Beebe in Atlantic.

FIRST RECORDED AIR FIGHT

Frenchmen, Rivals in Love, Had Strange and Fatal Duel More Than One Hundred Years Ago.

The first battle in the air and the strangest duel in the long history of the field of honor was fought 110 years ago near Paris. Two Frenchmen were ardent rivals for the affections of a woman, and so bitter did their quarrel become that only blood could wipe it out. Ordinary methods were too tame for these fiery spirits, so it was agreed that the duel should be fought from balloons. The cause of the trouble agreed to marry the victor.

When the selected day arrived the two fighters and their seconds repaired to the meeting place, only to find a great crowd assembled, for word of the strange encounter had spread broadcast. The principals, however, were undeterred. Two balloons, precisely alike, had been prepared, and into these they stepped. To each was handed a carefully loaded blunderbuss.

The word was given and the moorings cast off. Slowly the balloons ascended, almost side by side. At the height of about half a mile, when the great bags were but 50 yards apart, the signal was given and both men opened fire. Soon one of the balloons collapsed and crashed to the earth. The record says the woman kept her promise and married the victor of the aerial battle.
