Don't Worry, Przemysl is Plain Pzhem'is!

Przemysl, which the Russians are attacking, according to Lippincott's Gazetteer, the New International Encyclopedia and the Standard dictionary, is pronounced Pzhem'is! The "z" as is general with Slavic languages, is pronounced "zh," and the "r" is elided by the natural process of rapid enunciation and the tendency to render the consonantal combinations easier to pronounce.

MOSQUITO HAD ITS INNING

Died in the End, but It Had Considerable Fun With President of the Lodge.

What a nuisance a little mosquito can make itself. A local man tells me that when he had occasion to preside at a lodge meeting he found this out.

It was one of those soft, muggy nights when the face is moist and the mosquitoes if there be any about, delight to pester one. The man had hardly taken his place as presiding officer when the mosquito made its appearance, singing its war song and looking for blood. It made a first attack behind the ear, just as our friend was making some important announcement.

Just as the mosquito penetrated the skin the man's hands were busy, and before he could shift the document he was reading to his other hand, the insect had escaped. In the shifting, however, and in the man's haste to get to the mosquito, he dropped the loose sheets of paper and the gentle breeze that had been cooling his heated brow very generously distributed them among those present.

The sheets were finally reassembled, however, and the business proceeded. But the mosquito was still present, or another one to take his place. This time a more direct attack was made on the cheek. The man made a desperate effort to get at his enemy, but the mosquito dodged, and in doing so, went in beneath the man's eyeglasses. The man continued his offensive operations, but with hardly due care, for he knocked off his glasses, which, fortunately, fell into his lap and were not broken. The mosquito escaped.

But revenge came at last. Not contented with his feast, and utterly disdainful of his pursuer's ability to accomplish his destruction, the mosquito returned and tried to penetrate in the man's neck. The man let him get well settled, and then, with a resounding slap, settled his destiny. That mosquito, at least, will never bother any one else, but he caused enough disturbance for so small an insect, for his destroyer's antics trying to "get to" him kept the members of the lodge well amused for five or ten minutes.—Lawrence Telegram.

Continuous Panorama Machine.

A machine has been invented which throws a continuous panorama completely around the inner surface of a cylindrical screen so that an observer standing at the center of the space enclosed by the screen will have the same view that he would have if standing in the midst of the actual scenes depicted. A number of partly successful attempts to accomplish this have been made by using several synchronized machines, but it has at last been done by the use of only one machine, and that of the simplest nature. The apparatus with which the pictures are made works much after the fashion of an ordinary panorama machine except that the casting carrying the lens and film makes a vertical axis at such a high rate of speed that the image on any part of the screen changes so rapidly, as with an ordinary motion picture machine, that the eye is unable to detect the break between successive pictures.

Rich Fortunes From Privateering.

A century ago such a situation as the present would have set merchants all agog to secure letters of marque for their vessels. It was a license from the crown authorizing a private ship to wage war against and to capture any of the enemy's vessels. In those days of wooden walls a well-armed clipper or East Indianian was almost a match for a frigate, but the aim of the privateer was to ravage the enemy's commerce. A lucrative pursuit it was, too. In one year Capt. Fortunatus Wright captured 16 ships worth 500,000 pounds, while from one cruise in the Spanish main the privateer Prince Frederick returned to Bristol with three-quarters of a million pounds in bar silver alone and other valuable cargo.

An Appeal to the Farmers.

Recognizing that America must supply an extra large part of the world's foodstuffs next year, the International Harvester company has begun a campaign to arouse farmers to their opportunity and duty. It urges every farmer to utilize every available acre and to increase the average yield of each acre. That is extremely good advice on two counts.

The first is the natural desire of all producers to have available a large supply of merchandise when there is an unusual demand. With Europe in chaos, no question exists about the demand and about the desirability of being able to fill it with profit. The second is the more humanitarian and altruistic consideration of ability to relieve, out of the overflowing storehouse of American farms, the suffering which Europe's shortage of grains and stock will inevitably produce. This has been a year of bounteous crops here. If careful planning and skillful working can do it, next year's crops should be even bigger, for there will be need for all that the best farming and the most propitious weather conditions can produce.—New York Tribune.

The Gathering Hosts.

"You have a number of relatives visiting you, have you not?" inquired the able editor of the village weekly.

"Yes," grimly confessed Montgomery Morose, a pessimistic person with an excellent excuse for so being. "Despite a strict censorship I am able to authoritatively inform you that practically the entire standing army of my wife's kinfoolks, together with the reservists, the colonials, the Landwehr and the Landsturm, is now mobilizing to go to the aid of the balance of the heated term."—Judge.

HABIT TRACED TO AZTECS

Americans Not the Original Gum Chewers, as the World Seems to Have Believed.

The Aztecs of Mexico are said to have been the first gum chewers known in this, or, for that matter, any other, continent. The followers of Cortez reported that the Indians chewed a gum to quench thirst and relieve exhaustion. They obtained it from the sapote tree by tapping, and today the manner of gathering the sap is in close analogy to the process of gathering maple sugar in New England. The tree is indigenous to the northern countries of South America, Central America and especially in Mexico, the last named furnishing about six-sevenths of the entire supply consumed annually in the United States.

The sapote tree is usually found in groups, frequently grows to a height of 40 to 50 feet, is generally very straight, and has a long, clear length which makes it most desirable for timber. The wood is of a reddish mahogany color, is quite hard, heavy, compact in texture and fine grained. Door sills and frames of this remarkable wood have been unearthed in the prehistoric ruins of Uxmal and found to be in an excellent state of preservation. The wood is in demand today by cabinet makers, who employ it in the manufacture of high grade furniture and household fittings. The fruit, the sapodilla pear, was once very popular in Latin-American markets, but the constant demand for the gum and the consequent tapping so reduced the size and quality of the fruit that it has become almost a negligible product. Throughout the rainy season, while the sap is up, the tapping is done by the "chicleros," whose only implements are a machete and a piece of rope.

The rope is fastened about the waist and slipped around a tree, leaving the chiclero's hands free to make the V-shaped incisions spirally all around the tree. The sap runs along the incisions and is collected in cups at the base. It looks like milk at first, but soon turns to a yellowish color and thickens to the consistency of treacle. It is collected and boiled in a rather primitive manner in large kettles, and when it has reached the proper consistency it is kneaded and the surplus moisture expressed. It is then molded into large loaves and is ready for shipment.—Argonaut.

Turkish Women Study Medicine.

Medicine has been practiced by Turkish women for some time, because it is only recently that men doctors have been allowed within the harem. Curiously enough, it is one of the oldest superstitions of the Mohammedan world that has given the greatest impetus to medical studies for women. It is thought among the Moslems that the last wish of an old woman is sacred and must be carried out at all costs. Not long ago the wife of a former grand vizier, Halhidin pasha, died. On her death bed she expressed as her last wish that her twelve-year-old daughter might take special courses in medicine, similar to those given to men. There was nothing for the government to do but to hastily open certain of these courses to women in order that they might not be cursed by ignoring the dying wish of a respected old woman.—Katharine Büell, in Harper's Weekly.

Cure for Hay Fever.

Dr. Claude Lowdermilk of Galena, Kan., reports to the Journal of the American Medical Association that of three hay-fever patients treated with a toxin prepared from pollen before the onset of the symptoms not one had an attack throughout the season, and that of sixteen so treated after the onset thirteen were cured. Doctor Lowdermilk gave also an autogenous vaccine.

"Mummies" Opinion.

In the recent London dispatch revealing the activities of the entirely respectable Queen Mary as a busy little bee there was a pleasing anecdote about a friendly call paid by her not long ago upon a certain peeress. The honorable hostess of the occasion is said to be very popular among the "Intellectuals" and in less favor "at court" than her husband. The queen asked to see the small daughter of the house, and while waiting took out her inevitable knitting and set industriously to work. When the little girl appeared she was fascinated by the sight, and the queen good-naturedly told her that she must ask her mamma to teach her to knit.

"Mummy won't," replied the child. "She says that all sorts of needle-work is just for people who like to work their fingers because they haven't any brains to work."

Gravestones Sink into Ground.

Antiquarians will be greatly interested in the recent find of the Boston cemetery department at the ancient Phipps street burial ground, Charlestown. Ten gravestones were discovered in different parts of the ground, all buried beneath several feet of earth. It was evident that they had been sunk into the ground by their own weight more than a century ago. The Phipps street ground was the burial place of early settlers from 1630. The most ancient stone was of April, 1666, erected over the grave of Maud Graves. Two others are of that century, six are of the years 17, 1712, 1734, 1737, 1747, while one is of the year 1801.

Purifies Blood With Telling Effect

Gives Conscious Evidence of Its Direct Action.

S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, almost talks as it sweeps its way through the circulation. Its action is so direct that very often in some forms of skin affliction the appearance of the eruptions changes over night, the itch and redness are gone and recovery begins immediately.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutrient. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antiodal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 534 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores, but never... all substitutes. Do not accept them.
