The Widow's Appeal:

"Will you give the Red Cross ability to save my boy's life if he should be wounded?"

If a bomb were dropped from a Zep and were to explode in their place of business, some of the dollar-seeking parasites in this country might realize that the United States is at war.

Pella, Iowa, with a population of 3,021, leads the nation in proportion to Liberty Loan Bonds—$4,000 per family being subscribed. The citizens of Pella and surrounding country are mostly Hollanders.

The person who is able and will not contribute something to one or more of the various organizations which are working for the physical and moral welfare of our soldier boys, is not worthy the respect of decent people and should be ostracized by everyone who loves liberty.

It is said the mayor of Chicago refused to purchase a Liberty Bond for fear he might offend the German population of that city. He, or any other man, who is so unpatriotic as to think more of the feelings of foreigners than of the call of our president, should be expatriated. The German population of this country, natural born or naturalized, are as a class truer citizens than such offal as the mayor of Chicago and other like degenerates.

Bowel Complaints in India.

In a lecture at one of the Des Moines, Iowa, churches a missionary from India told of going into the interior of India, where he was taken sick, that he had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with him and believed that it saved his life. This remedy is used successfully in India both as a preventive and cure for cholera. You may know from this that it can be depended upon for the milder forms of bowel complaint that occur in this country. Obtainable everywhere.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy. It is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

My Guardian

By SADIE OLCOTT

My earliest recollections are of leaving home in the east and journeying to Colorado. We went part way by rail and the rest by stagecoach. Our home was on the stage road between Denver and Georgetown. My father was engaged in mining operations of one kind or another for ten or twelve years. My mother died at this time.

A short distance from where we lived an old lady kept house for her son, who had prospered in having bought a mine which turned out to be very valuable. His name was Henry Ashurst. As a little girl I used to look up to him as something very far above me. When I was fourteen years old my father struck a vein of ore which promised to produce a fortune. I remember seeing certain holes that had been dug, but that was all I knew about the mine.

My father died suddenly before his mine was developed enough to be sure of its value. Before passing away he asked Mrs. Ashurst to take care of me and appointed Henry Ashurst my guardian. I was then fifteen, and Henry was twenty-eight.

By way of consoling me at the time of my father's death they told me that I was heiress to a large fortune in the mine my father had discovered. I was not consoled by the information. I was at an age where I could not appreciate the advantage of wealth. I only knew that I was alone in the world. At the same time I was fortunate in having a home with two such persons as Mrs. Ashurst and her son. They were both very kind to me, and I was assured that I was to remain with them always.

I was still a child in feeling, and my bearing toward my foster father was that of a child. Had he been my real father I could not have borne myself any differently toward him. I always kissed him good night before going to bed and on meeting him in the morning. He often went either to Denver or to Georgetown, and sometimes when he journeyed on horseback I went with him. I had my own horse.

I went to school in the east, but not for long, being homesick for those who had taken the place of parents to me, and when I returned I don't know whether they or I were more delighted at our reunion. Nevertheless, there was a different feeling between Henry and me. While I was gone from home I had changed from a child to a woman. There were no more father and daughter kisses mornings and nights; no more sitting on his lap while he told me stories. Besides, when we went away from home together, Mrs. Ashurst went with us.

It was not long after my return from school that I noticed anxiety on the faces of Henry and his mother. Something had gone wrong with them, but they did not tell me what it was. Nevertheless, I heard certain things that led me to believe that Henry had been investing the money he had made in certain properties that had turned out worthless, and he and his mother were impoverished. This information came to me about the time I reached my eighteenth birthday, which was the age when I could claim my property and release my guardian.

One day Henry Ashurst called me into the library. He was sitting at a desk with papers spread out before him. He placed a chair for me beside him and began to tell me about my property.

"I have now to give an account to you of my stewardship," he said. "I have been prudent in the management of your estate, preferring to lease rather than that it should be worked by the owner. There are fourteen different leases, and they are at present paying royalties amounting to about $20,000. The expenses that you as owner incur are about $4,000, leaving you an income of $16,000."

"And this is all mine; none of it yours?"

"Certainly. Your father and I were good friends, although he was older than I. He relied on me to take care of the property for you and make it pay you."

"Did he expect you to do this for nothing?"

"There was no provision made in the will for compensation of guardian."

"You were then well off, weren't you?"

"Yes."

"And you have since met with financial losses?"

"I have."

"I can't manage this estate," I said. "I must have a husband to manage it for me."

He winced at this and asked me if I had any one in view. I told him that I had. "There is a man whom I dearly love. I propose to turn over the management of my property to him at once. If I can win his love afterward well and good."

He was evidently much disturbed at this, but pulled himself together and said that all was ready for the transfer, and I had only to name his successor.

"I desire," I replied, "that you shall succeed yourself."

He looked at me with a puzzled expression. I snuggled up against him as I had done when I was a little girl and looked what I did not say. He understood and folded me in his arms.

"But"—he began.

"No buts," I broke in.

"What will the world say?"

"The world has nothing to do with the matter."

His mother was overjoyed when we announced what had occurred.
