Farmers of Eagle Valley, whether they are subject to income tax or not will in all probability be required to make an income tax report this year. Those who have struggled with this report a year ago will appreciate the value of a farm record book as a money saver in making the tax return. The Baker County Farm Bureau is co-operating with the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture and the Oregon Agricultural College is having record books published. These record books are simple, yet detail and comprehensive. The record books can be obtained at the publication price of 25c from the Eagle Valley State Bank.

HAMMOND IDEA IS O.K.

Crewless Ship Proves to Be a Success.

Army and Navy Experts Report That Wireless Control is Possible.

Washington.—Army and navy experts have reported the device of John Hays Hammond, Jr., for radio control of surface craft to be sent laden with explosives against enemy ships a success, and predict similar results with submerged craft showing above water only wireless antennae.

Results of tests were made public in connection with the new fortifications appropriation bill, which carries $175,000 for construction of an experimental submerged boat.

Secretary Baker wrote the house appropriations committee, which is considering the bill, that the joint army and navy board was "convinced of the practicability of the control" of the surface craft, and added that there had also been demonstrations of the possibility of the control of a craft completely submerged except for an air intake pipe.

Before finally deciding on the purchase of the patents for $750,000 the board desires further experiment with the submerged craft.

Construction of the submerged craft, which will be about 80 feet long by 7 feet in diameter, will take two years, according to Mr. Hammond, who told the committee he has spent ten years and $100,000 on his invention.

"There is no question whatever as to the ability to control with great accuracy the torpedo or carrier," said a letter of Maj. Gen. F. W. Cox, a member of the board, "so long as it is a surface vessel or has any antennae above the water, by direct radio waves, either from shore or from an airplane."

With a shore station having a height of 80 feet above sea level radio control of the craft has been demonstrated to the board by a distance of seven miles, but General Cox said that if controlled from an airplane there was no limit as to distance except the propelling power of the torpedo or the boat that carried it or the airplane.

VIENNESE MERRY DESPITE DEFEAT

They Know They Were Beaten, Admit It, and Let It Go at That.

SMART CAFES ARE CROWDED

People Are Well Dressed, Cheerful, and Pay Enormous Prices for Chocolate and Cakes—Future Left to the Politicians.

Vienna.—Perhaps the most striking characteristic of Vienna just now is its citizens' indifference. To enter the crowded, smart, beautifully decorated cafes and watch the lively, laughing public there is to ask: "Do these people realize that they have lost the war and an empire, and are reduced to being citizens of a poverty-stricken state of under $1,000,000, with an enormous war debt, a bankrupt exchequer and an ever-growing army of unemployed?"

If a foreigner visited this city's cafes and restaurants without being told that he was in a country that had been engaged in a disastrous war for over four years he would think its citizens summed themselves in peaceful prosperity. Laughter, careless talk about the opera, the ballet and a prominent actress' private life greet you from all sides. Not a word about war or politics.

Officers in bright colored uniforms with much gold lace and with rows of decorations glittering on their tunics, are as lively as the civilians, while the well-gowned women in costly, fashionable furs and jewelry, leave nothing to those who enjoyed life here before the war. They are every whit as "chic," as gay and as up-to-date.

The Smartest Cafe.

Strange to relate, Vienna's smartest, dearest and most sought-after cafe was opened during the war. The Cafe Krantz is the last word in luxury and attractiveness. Money has been lavished on its decorations, and its music is supplied by the orchestra of the Volks opera, conducted by the popular violinist and composer, Willy Kleinberg. Here idlers sip chocolate made with water at 60 cents a small cup, eat small cakes of whitest flour at 70 cents each, flirt, chat and listen to as good music as you can enjoy anywhere in the world.

Each seat at one of the little round tables costs 12 cents on ordinary days, but on holidays, such as New Year's eve, you cannot get inside the place under 60 cents, while the best seats, which are in the gallery upstairs, overlooking the high hall, where the music is, and the main part of the cafe, cost $1. Every seat is taken, every occupant happy, careless and absorbed merely in pleasure.

The same crowd is to be seen at Pucher's tea room, opened a year ago, with brocade hung walls and discreet corners. Here, a cracker costs 50 cents and a cupful of chocolate 80 cents, while a portion of imitation tea, without sugar or milk, can be had for 50 cents. The crowd here is as well dressed, as cheerful and as indifferent to the Versailles conference as that in the Cafe Krantz.

The Atlantis, another magnificent cafe built during the war, is on the ground floor of a hotel, unopened only because Vienna cannot find furniture for it. At least it was till a couple of days ago, when the Italian military commission arrived here, General Segre in command, and opened offices on the first floor. The Italian flag hangs from the balcony, over the heads of the cafe habitués, but nobody mentions it, or the war and its disasters.

"Is This What We Fought For?" Now and again some battered-looking officer in shabby uniform can be seen scowling on the thoughtless crowd with a look that says: "Is this what we fought for?" But such are few and far between. The majority of the military people take recent events like the civilians. A Viennese explained it to me:

"They are so happy the war is over."

It matters not what comes next; the problems of the future are left to professional politicians. The war is over, the cafes are attractive, the opera is open. These are the things which matter. No wonder you hear people say: "There is no fear of bolshewism, for people are too careless to want it."

This attitude is not the boastful one of the Germans, who tell the universe they are not beaten. The Austrian knows he is beaten and says so. But so long as his pocketbook is stuffed with paper money he keeps smiling and goes to the restaurant and cafe of his choice to look at the pretty women and talk about the ballet. Nothing else is worth notice.

Bentinck's Cook Kaiser's Double

Amsterdam.—Count Bentinck, host to William Hohenzollern, has a cook who is a dead ringer for the ex-kaiser. He is frequently pointed out to strangers as the former German ruler, and when observed carries out the part with rare dignity and majesty of pose.

MAJ. GEN. ARTHUR MURRAY

Maj. Gen. Arthur Murray, retired, will be clerk of the military affairs committee of the next house, unless the war department objects. Representative Julius Kahn, who will be chairman of the committee, has announced that he will have General Murray appointed to the position.

FRENCH NAVY LOST 134 SHIPS

Total of Tonnage, 110,000; Four Battleships and Four Armored Cruisers in List.

Paris.—A full list of French naval losses in the war includes four battleships, the Bouvet, Suffren, Gaulois and Danton; four armored cruisers, the Leon Gambetta, Admiral Charner, Cleber and Dupetit Thouars; one fast cruiser, the Chateaufort; fourteen destroyers, eight torpedo boats and fourteen submarines. One of the submarines, the Durt, was refloated by the enemy, but was subsequently recovered. Minor ships sunk were five auxiliary cruisers, four gunboats, seventy-two submarine chasers, one sloop and seven small craft.

The French loss totaled 110,000 tons, against 550,000 tons for England, 76,000 tons for Italy and 17,500 tons for the United States.

50,000 YANKS GO TO SCHOOL

Hundreds of Former Instructors Are Chosen to Teach Soldiers of the A. E. F. in France.

Paris.—Fifty thousand soldiers of the American expeditionary forces have enrolled as students in the army post schools in France, conducted under the direction of the army educational commission. Hundreds of former college and academy professors and instructors drawn from the various branches of the A. E. F. have been sent to teach in these schools.

The plan is to make these divisional schools continue in operation with the division until it is returned home and demobilized.

Statements by local poultrymen indicate that it now costs so much to maintain chickens that the owners are tempted to eat the feed and let the chickens take their chances.

John Boyle, who died at Jersey City, N. J., recently, was one of the four men rescued alive in 1891 from the Jennings mines of J. C. Hayden & Co., when 21 miners were entombed for 19 days by a rush of water. The four survivors ate a mine mule drowned with their 17 comrades.

Boyle was widely known as a fighter in the Lehigh field, but lost his taste for the coal regions after his 19 days of darkness and moved to New Jersey.
