IN SHEER CRUELTY

Boches Operated on Prisoners Without Anesthetics.

Ample Proof That There Was No Shortage of Medical Supplies in Evidence of Fiendishness of Hun Surgeons.

A British prisoner taken near St. Quentin in March said that all amputations in Germany were being done without anesthetics, owing to alleged shortages of them. A correspondent writes:

"On the day that the prince of Wales entered Denain and attended the service of thanksgiving in the church there I lingered behind after all the ceremonies were over and talked with the inhabitants. They had been badly treated. They were full of the stories of their legitimate woes. One old man said to me:

"M'sien should see the English doctor. He knows!"
"I saw him. He was a major in charge of a Canadian field ambulance. When I found him, in the huge building which he had transformed into a hospital, he was busy superintending the treatment of women and pitiful little children who had been gassed by the Boches in defiance of all the laws of humanity. There was one little fellow howling with terror. He did not wish to remain with the military. He had only known the German soldier!"

"Well, then take him away, poor little chap," said the major. "Bring him back three times a day to be dressed."
"Then the major and I talked of the successful Canadian attack and of the condition of the town when it had been taken. It was not a pretty story. It was, in fact, a terrible indictment against the Boche.

"They starved the civilians. The only meat they gave them in three years was three dead mules. And all the time their own officers were living on the best."

"Then there was shortage?"
"Oh, yes, there was a shortage; but the German officers did not feel it."
"And their other supplies? Your line, for instance—medical supplies?"
"The major laughed.
"Come with me," he said, "and I'll show you a field medical cart that we captured just as they were driving it off. It is one of the most wonderful things I have ever seen."

"We went into the transport yard and here we found something like a Scotch cart with a closed-in top, bearing the Red Cross on its sides. The major let down the back flap and we saw a series of drawers, like an enlarged card-index file cabinet. He pulled one out.

"Look at that," he said. "There you have most of the drugs we have been short of for months—and have then in profusion. Morphine, chloroform—anything you like. It is the most perfect thing of its kind I have ever seen. You could sell that cart's cargo in England for its weight in gold. It contains some of the most valuable and rarest synthetic drugs in the world. It is treasure trove. . . . Like a souvenir? Here, then—here's a case of a dozen pains of morphine—or chloroform—or antipyrin."

"That was in a field medical cart! If such a supply of rare drugs could be sent up practically to the front line, what must the German have had in his rear hospitals? What, then, can be his excuse for amputating the limbs of our wounded prisoners without anesthetics? Can it have been anything but wanton cruelty?"
"That field medical cart is the evidence!"—Boston Transcript.

Too Much Arithmetic.
Uncle Mose Lightfoot approached a clerk in the drug store and inquired: "Got any three-cent stamps?"
"No," the clerk replied, "we're all out of threes."
"Dat's too bad," said Uncle Mose. "cause dis letter ought to go out to-night."
"We have plenty of twos."
"But dis letter goes out of town."
"And we have plenty of ones."
"But one won't take it."
"Couldn't you put on a two and a one?"
"Huh?"
"Or three ones?"
As the old dorky ambled toward the door he scratched his head and answered:
"Maybe I could; maybe I could; but I ain't got no time to be foolin' round trying to add up."

Rat Perils Flyer; High Altitude Kills Rodent

London.—Rats can't live in high altitudes.

Interesting as indicating a difficulty if not a danger in long distance flying which will have to be guarded against, is the story of an adventurous rat, told on their arrival at Karachi by Maj. Gen. Salmon and his party, who are flying from Cairo to Australia by way of Persia and India.

The rat, attracted by the food supplies, is believed to have boarded an airplane at Chabar, a previous stopping place, or earlier. At all events, it was heard gnawing after leaving Chabar, and at Karachi the guard which protected the machine during the night heard the rat continuing its nibbling. The rat, however, could not be located or caught. After leaving Karachi its activities went on, and as it was thought it might be gnawing some important part of the machine, it was decided to see if cold would have any effect on its activities.

The machine was accordingly taken to over 10,000 feet, and this was too much for a rat nurtured in the balmy warmth of the Persian gulf, and frozen or numbed with cold, it could apparently hold on no longer, and dropped off into space.

BONELESS BEEF SAVES U. S. ARMY $73,000 DAILY

War Department Cuts Expenses on Meat Shipments for the A. E. F.

Thousands of tons of boneless beef was shipped to the American Expeditionary Forces in order to cut the cost of transportation and save valuable freight space. This is only one of scores of ways in which the government eliminated unnecessary expense in the endeavor to make every dollar raised through the four popular Liberty Loans go as far as possible.

By shipping all meat for the overseas troops with the bones cut out at the packing houses in America it has been estimated that a saving of $73,000 daily was made. The suggestion to ship the meat in this economical manner was made by an army man after he watched thousands of tons go forward by the old method. A carcass of beef contains twenty-five pounds of bone to every hundred pounds of meat and requires twice the shipping space.

It is with such unanswerable arguments as these that the government is replying to the charges that money was carelessly spent during the war making necessary the calling of the Victory Loan.

It is foolish to lay out money in a purchase of repentance.

Money can beget money, and its offspring can beget more.
