Uncle Sam Sets a Good Example

VIEW OF U. S. CAPITOL DURING PAINTING.

The dome of the United States Capitol at Washington is kept in excellent condition by painting it every few years. For this work forty painters are steadily employed for three months' time. Over five thousand gallons of paint are required for one coat. The reason for painting the Capitol dome at regular intervals is to prevent disintegration of metallic surface.

hear the tales he will tell? But to him there is this consolation, To the boys who returned from "over there" he will cry out in joy: "Comrades across the sea; boys who shed blood for the common cause, return to America and recuperate from the shock and noise. Don't fear the bandits, for while we have two good arms and two good legs we will fight until you are able to make your own way in life. You have fought a good fight; you have won a great cause, and we men on the border as one call out: 'We will not forsake you now.'"

When the whirl and excitement of the tide of getting out of service has ceased; when the country has returned to periods of pre-war times and men have been placed in berths of industry; when Uncle Sam to his army of border men sings out: "It is enough;" then shall these unsung, unpraised, uncrowned heroes of the Mexican borderlands return whence they came;—into the strange world of freedom to seek a place in the great industries of the world.

These are the men who have protected America, not by gallant work in far away France; but upon the border lines in the south west of these United States. These are the men who are never praised; the men who never break into the public press; the men who deserve great credit and are being showered with little.

In our mark of appreciation for the warriors bold let us not be carried away entirely by the deeds on France's torn fields; give some credit to the lad who first answered his country's call and who is now protecting our resources in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and in lower California.

Recovers $4,000 From Son.

Olympia, Wash.—By decision of the Supreme court, affirming the Stevens county court, John J. Thomas recovers $4,000 from his son, Charles E. Thomas, and his brother-in-law, G. W. Roberts. He worked for them seven years on a ranch near Chewelah without a specific understanding as to pay and claimed he could not collect anything. According to his statement he worked from 5 a. m. until 9 p. m., and sometimes midnight. He thought this was worth about $75 a month and board, and both courts coincide with this estimate to the extent of $4,000.

Factory to Crack Nuts Will Open in Georgia

A pecan-cracking plant capitalized at $40,000, which will be increased shortly, has been established at Baconton, Ga. Five modern, electrically driven pecan-cracking machines will be started immediately, capable of cracking 125,000 pounds of nuts this year. It is planned to increase the capacity to 500,000 pounds next year.

GOURAUD AND YANKS WON WAR

Colonel Hayward Asserts Foe

KNEW ABOUT GERMAN PLANS

Through Prisoners French General
Learned of Exact Hour of Hun's
Great Offensive and Beat
Them to It.

New York.—The story of how General Gouraud obtained through prisoners word of the exact hour at which the last great German offensive of the war was to be launched, and how, with the aid of American troops, he hurled back the advancing hordes, was told by Col. William Hayward of the Three Hundred and Sixty-ninth infantry (colored), the former Fifteenth New York.

This German drive, launched on July 15, was the turning point of the war. Colonel Hayward declared, reinforced by released prisoners from Russia, the foe was at the zenith of his power. The blow came east of Reims.

"We knew this attack was coming, and knew it was to be the maximum German effort," Colonel Hayward said. "About one hour before 1 o'clock on the night of July 14 we captured German prisoners in a raid. They told us when the attack would come.

Beat Them to It.

"The artillery preparation was to start at midnight and last for five hours and twenty-five minutes. So General Gouraud started our artillery fire five minutes ahead of theirs.

"That put them up in the air. Fritz had to send to Hans to ask what the change in his plans meant.

"When the French knew when this battle was coming, their lines did not remain a thin blue line. It seemed that all the soldiers and all the cannons in the world crawled over and took position back of us.

"General Gouraud saved the world for civilization. I have heard stories about how hard he had to work to convince General Potain and Marshal Foch that his plan was right.

"But he took a chance—the greatest chance any soldier ever took in the world. He took his troops out of the front line trenches over a front of fifty kilometers.

"Some of these trenches had cost thousands of lives. Men had toiled for weeks and months to gain these positions. He abandoned them when he was sure where the attack was coming.

"And when this occurred he had the Three Hundred and Sixty-ninth American infantry on one end of that fifty kilometer line and the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth on the other.

"When the troops were withdrawn from the front line only patrols were left. On my regiment's front, instead of 1,600 men, only sixteen volunteers were left. They were left in specially reinforced trenches with signal rockets, gas shells, and a few machine guns.

"And so the German fire fell on these front line trenches for five hours and twenty-five minutes—and those shells fell on empty trenches, except for those patrols who stayed there expecting to be killed, but who, strangely enough, practically all came back to us in the morning.

Cut to Pieces.

"When the hour for the German infantry attack came they set off the gas bombs and the signal rockets. Our artillery saw the signal rockets and cut loose on the massed German infantry.

"The German masses were literally smashed by the terrific French artillery fire, and the gas shells our boys had left smothered them with the deadly mustard gas.

"They never got through to our second lines. Our boys sat on the parapets of the trenches and watched the 'show.'

"But on the other end they did get through. They crashed into the Rainbow division and the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth infantry (the old Sixty-ninth New York), met them hand to hand in some of the most terrible fighting of the war—fighting fit for that terrible battle.

"General Gouraud's army stopped the German rush and in an address to his troops General Gouraud pointed out that the American troops in his army were my little old Three Hundred and Sixty-ninth, the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth, and others of the Rainbow division, and some railway artillery batteries."

New Anti-Trust Extension.

Washington.—A joint resolution by Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, extending again for two years the effective date of section 10 of the Clayton anti-trust act prohibiting carriers from making contracts with corporations with which their directors interlock, was adopted by the senate without debate. This date has been postponed several times since the Clayton law was enacted.
