FARMERS' CONVENTION. SPOKANE, JUNE 11 TO 13

Eight men of national reputation have been secured as the principal speakers for the big northwest farmers' convention to be held in Spokane June 11-13. These men come from widely separated sections of the country and each of them has a distinct message to be delivered. Each is an enthusiast on the subject of farm organization and each will present the advantages of organization from a different viewpoint. The speakers include:

Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, chairman of the senate committee on agriculture.

Gifford Pinchot, president Pennsylvania Rural Progress association and former chief of the United States forestry service.

Charles S. Barrett of Georgia, national president of Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union.

Dr. W. J. Spillman, economist, editor of the Philadelphia Farm Journal, formerly department director of agriculture at the Washington State college.

Milo D. Campbell, of Coldwater, Michigan, president National Milk Producers' Federation.

John A. McSparren, master Pennsylvania State Grange, with a membership of 70,000.

Morris McAuliffe, president of the Kansas Farmers' Union.

A. A. Elmore, organizer, president of Washington State Farmers' Union.

The convention at Spokane is one of a series which is being arranged in different parts of the country under the auspices of the national board of farm organizations. The principal purpose is to agitate the formation of a central body which shall be broad enough in scope to include every organized body in which farmers now hold affiliation. Lessons of the war impressed upon leaders in agricultural progress the necessity of some national board which, acting through its various branches, could properly represent the sentiments of the producers from the soil. Such a body would have enormous weight in legislative matters.

An important subject of discussion at the Spokane convention will be, "Should there be an international bureau of agriculture as a part of the League of Nations?"

All producers from the soil, living in Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Montana, whether affiliated with any organization or not, are invited to the Spokane convention.

The convention will be held in the big state armory which has a seating capacity for 4,000 persons.
