EASY TO TALK TOO MUCH

One Must Admit There Is Much Truth in the Sage Reflections of Mr. Gorlington.

"It is my opinion," said Mr. Gorlington, "that beggars talk too much. For instance, this morning I met a man who asked me for a nickel with which to buy a cup of coffee. As I was reaching for the nickel he kept right on talking, telling me among other things that he hadn't had anything to eat for three days, which I knew of course was false, and which detracted very much from my pleasure in giving. 'I am an easy mark. Perhaps as I grow older I shall grow harder, but as I feel about it now I would rather give to a dozen friends than take a chance of missing one man who was hungry. Still I don't like the fraud to be too obvious; and I am sure there must be many prospective givers who, when the beggar keeps on with that surplus talk, regard their original determination to give and keep their money in their pocket. Surely you would think the beggar would learn wisdom and talk less, wouldn't you?"

"But the beggar is not the only man. How often do we hear it said of some business speaker that he is a good talker but he talks too much! This may seem a harsh way of putting it, but that's what people say. This speaker opens engagingly and talks for a time to the pleasure of everybody, wandering on then interminably to the complete obliteration of the first favorable impression. Here the only result is the firing of the speaker's batteries; but talking too much might have a far more serious result in the case of, say, a man applying for a job.

"Many a man has talked himself out of a prospective job. He goes to the employer with what he wants to say clearly laid out in his mind, he says this clearly and simply, and the employer has practically made up his mind to take him; but then the applicant keeps on talking, to his own undoing. As he talks he reveals himself in a light less favorable; he discloses perhaps some peculiarity that may not really be a detriment but that strikes the employer not agreeably; and so this job that at first the applicant had felt perfectly sure of slips away from him entirely and without his realizing just how it all came about.

"The beggar is far from being alone in over-talking. There are many men in many walks who lack the fine gift of knowing when to stop."

Fascination of a Helmet.

The Hun helmet possesses a strong fascination for the American soldier. Apparently he is not able to resist the temptation to capture one whenever or wherever he sees it. A news story from the Rhine country tells us that German policemen of the towns occupied by the American troops have given up wearing helmets. Many of the policemen gave them up because they had none to wear. Others discontinued their use because the American officers made the discontinuance a request. The American soldiers, it is explained, couldn't resist the impulse to capture them. The German policemen were rushed all along the Rhine and deftly unbuckled. It all shows that the primitive instinct that urges a victor to take from the conquered some symbol of his subjugation continues strong in the warrior breast.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Old Mexican God Unearthed.

A statue of "Xochipilli," Aztec god of flowers, has been discovered by William Nivari, an American archaeologist who has been in Mexico recently. The statue, the representation of the god known to have been discovered in virtually a perfect state of preservation in modern times, was dug up at Atzacapotzalco, a suburb of the capital, and which, prior to the coming of Cortez, was the seat of a powerful Indian nation, but which, at the time of the conquest, was the great slave mart of the inhabitants of Tenochtitlan, home of the Aztecs and the site of the modern city of Mexico. In addition to its slave trade, Atzacapotzalco was noted for its expert jewelers and wonderfully cultivated gardens. "Xochipilli" is supposed to have presided over one of these ancient gardens.

Yet Another.

The number of proposed undersea tunnels is increasing every day. Already to that under the Straits of Dover has been added the suggestion for one under the Irish channel. And now comes Colonel Rubbo y Belva, who has obtained permission from the Spanish government to carry out the preliminary soundings with a view to connecting Spain with Morocco by tunneling the Straits of Gibraltar. The proposal is that the new tunnel should dip west of Tarifa and come to the surface again east of Tangier. This would make it, roughly, some twenty miles long, which is within three miles of the greatest breadth of the straits, a breadth which varies from eight and a half to twenty-three miles.

Swallow Is Enemy of Mosquito.

If you want to free the neighborhood of mosquitoes encourage swallows to make themselves at home, says the American Forestry association. These birds feed almost entirely upon obnoxious insects and they will do much toward protecting orchards and other trees from insect pests. No better investment can be made, therefore, than some houses set out for martins or other swallows. Of the blue swallows the purple martin is the largest, the male being entirely blue above with a gray breast. Swallows are highly migratory, most of them spending the winter in South America.

Only Tamed Humming Bird.

Sergeant Charles Heberford and Orderly M. J. Maw, of the National Soldiers' home, at Sawtelle, Cal., are the proud possessors of what is believed to be the only pet hummingbird in existence, says Our Dumb Animals. Their feathered friend is a beautiful red-breasted specimen who answers to the name of Dick.

This unusual bird is so tame that he eats his meals from the end of a medicine-dropper held in the mouth of one of his friends. They feed him sugar syrup in this way. He will also tread air while sipping nectar from a cluster of flowers held by one of the men. Another favorite stunt of his is that of perching upon their fingers while eating his meals.

The men are both pensioned veterans of the Spanish-American war. They discovered the bird flitting around the home grounds a year ago, and decided to tame it. Orderly Maw having had experience taming birds in the tropics many years ago when he was a soldier. By putting out dishes of sugar syrup for the hummer they gradually domesticated it.

The Ghost Ship.

Among the war stories that British naval men feel free to tell now is one about a "ghost ship" whose mystery has never been solved.

In 1917 a convoy of 12 ships left a British port. At dawn on the day after sailing the escort commander discovered thirteen ships under his charge. While the identity of the extra ship was being discussed the convoy was suddenly attacked by German light cruisers and most of the escort and nine of the merchantmen were sunk. The Germans then made off.

Survivors positively assert that there were thirteen ships and that the mysterious vessel disappeared as strangely as she had appeared. They are certain that the ship was not sunk. Official inquiries failed to throw any light on the nature of the craft. It was ascertained that she could not have been a disguised German raider, and her presence was "logged" by the escort commander.

Skipper Was Peevish.

At a certain naval port the other day, when a low tide and an obstinate wind made it difficult for vessels to tie up at the pier, a submarine was endeavoring to tie up. Three times did the patient commander maneuver his craft in fairly close, but each time the wind caught his bows and blew the boat away. On deck stood a young sailor who had made no fewer than five attempts to heave a line on to the pier, but on each occasion the rope fell into the water halfway. Once more the boat neared the pier, and the "skipper" felt sure the man would manage it this time, but, alas! it hit the wall about five feet too low.

This was too much for him, and leaning over the bridge-screen, he shouted: "Shove the bally thing in your teeth and swim across before you wear it out!"
