OFFICIAL DIRECTORY.

UNITED STATES. William McKinley, President. Garrett A. Hobart, Vice President. John Hay, Secretary of State.

STATE OF OREGON.

T. T. Geer, Governor. F. I. Dunbar, Secretary of State. Chas. S. Moore, Treasurer.

SEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT.

F. A. Moore, R. S. Bond, C. E. Wolverton. W. L. Bradshaw, Circuit Judge. A. A. Jayne, Prosecuting Attorney.

SHERMAN COUNTY.

John Fulton, County Judge. R. P. Orr, H. H. King, Commissioners. Wm. Henrich, Clerk.

The war cloud hangs low over the Transvaal, and is likely to burst at any moment. How President Kruger can be so short-sighted as not to see that war with England will wind up his career as a president, and be the death blow to Boer supremacy in South Africa, passes comprehension.

Eastern Oregon stockmen are jubilant over the prospects of a plentiful supply of grass this fall. If the present showers and cloudy weather continue until there is no fear of the new growth of grass being burnt out again, there will be plenty of pasture for all, and the howls about the destruction of the bunch-grass will cease until we have another dry season.

An account comes from Cuba that many veterans of the Cuban army will not receive their pay, owing to the imperfect and inaccurate list. Hundreds of soldiers, whose names are not to be found on the list, follow United States commissioners from place to place in hopes of getting their pay.

THE SUGAR BEET.

Secretary of Agriculture Jas. Wilson speaks as follows on the sugar beet industry in Oregon: "Oregon wheat and Oregon fruit do not need comment by me. They are too well known, and their superiority is too apparent to need mention. But there is one industry that I might mention—the sugar-beet industry. It is a fact that any one of the Pacific coast states—Oregon, Washington or California—could if so inclined, raise enough sugar-beets to furnish the entire United States with sugar, and then have a surplus. The sugar-beet industry has, you might say, just got a good start in Oregon. It has been demonstrated that sugar-beets can be raised successfully, profitably and bountifully, and I now expect the industry to grow of its own accord, without further assistance from the department. We have shown that the beets could be raised, and shown how to raise them, and it is now a matter with the farmers. If they are so inclined, they can produce the bulk of the sugar for the United States, but how deeply they enter into this enterprise rests entirely with them now. There is but one thing the Oregon beetgrowers should learn, and that is economy in the matter of the pulp. If they but properly used the pulp as fodder, Oregon would never have to import another pig, another cow or other such live-stock, and when they have learned this little bit of economy there is every reason why the sugar-beet industry of Oregon should take first rank. And I expect it will, too."

John Burns, the great English labor leader and member of parliament, in a recent speech administered this flagellation to the newly acquired British subject, William Waldorf Astor: "I can tolerate a decent duke, or a militant marquis, whose power is often tempered by tradition, and whose caste feeling is qualified by service to the community; but the migratory money bag, a patriot only when his property is threatened, a citizen only when his comfort is encroached upon—he is too mean even to be tarred and feathered."

Those who wish to try their skill with a Mauser rifle, should take warning from the Portland merchant, who fired a shot from one of these guns brought from the Philippines. He took aim at the end of a 4x6 ten-foot plank placed in a corner of his store, and let her go. There was a roar like a canon, the merchant nearly went through his front window, while the bullet splintered the plank, wrecked the end of the store, went through a brick wall, and is now on its way to the Philippines.

The dear old Oregonian is having a hard time trying to be consistent with itself. It started out with a great flourish of trumpets to scare McKinley out of the White House. The scare was a failure. Everybody went on sawing wood and supporting the administration; and now the old lady wishes she had kept to her knitting needles and said nothing.—Pendleton Tribune.

Yakima Indians brought 316 head of horses for shipment at The Dalles recently. They were a portion of 2000 head contracted by the Linton horse cannery at $2 a head. The Indians had a hiyu skookum time blowing in their money, and, like their white tilliums, indulged in a liberal quantity of booze.

Passenger steamship companies have come to the conclusion that the very fast ocean flyer is not the vessel that pays the best, as the expenditure of coal to maintain a high rate of speed is enormous. Unless some other power besides steam be discovered the ocean greyhound has seen her best days.

The list of persons who have, in one way and another, become connected with the prosecution of Captain Alfred Dreyfus has grown to confounding proportions. It includes soldiers, officers, cabinet ministers, civilians, and even former ministers of the French Republic.

Dewey has been nominated by the St. Paul Globe to head the democratic ticket for president. The admiral is too level-headed to lend himself to raise any particular party to power, besides having the best job in the world now.

The silver craze is dying out. Even Bryan is beginning to see that a debased coinage can have no place in the United States. If he persists in making free silver a leading issue, he will jeopardize his chances for the nomination.

Rats are causing considerable damage in Portland fur stores. It is said a young energetic rat, with good teeth, can gnaw through one thousand dollars' worth of sealskin jackets in one night.

The few Americans who came over to Manila some time ago on the Esmeralda from Hong Kong, were astonished a few hours after sunrise, when their ship had steamed out to quarantine, to hear heavy cannonading from the monitor Monadnock, which was in plain sight down the coast about five miles below Manila. Some of the passengers thought it was some sort of salute in honor of the arrival of some distinguished naval or army hero, and they eagerly questioned a soldier who sat on the stern of the health officer's launch. "That?" said the young man, "that's nothing, that's just a battle." It was some time before the passengers could believe the Americans and insurgents were fighting within sight and sound of Manila, where the war had started six months before. The battle raged all day, and at four o'clock in the afternoon the rattle of small arms could be distinctly heard, and late in the evening the health officer told us the firing had been at Paranaque.

If we want to find a country where nature has turned things topsy-turvy—that is, according to our notion—we must go to Australia. Many things are reversed in that country. It is summer there while it is winter in America. Trees shed their bark instead of their leaves; fruit has the stone or kernel outside; swans are black; there is a species of fly that kills and eats the spider, and a fish, called the climbing perch, that walks deliberately out of the water, and, with the aid of its fins, climbs the adjacent trees after the insects that infest them. When to this we add that most of the birds have no song and the flowers no odors, it is easily seen that it is on the other side of the world in more senses than one.

It is gratifying to note the cordial relations between General Miles and Chief Secretary Root. "A house divided against itself cannot stand," and bickering amongst the heads of the war department can in no way be conducive to the welfare of the army. General Miles says: "The new secretary of war is a man of business. As a result, different conditions already exist. The interests of the country have demanded a vigorous prosecution of the war in the Philippines: now they will have it."

A live grasshopper will eat a dead grasshopper. A Missouri farmer mixed paris green and bran together and let a grasshopper eat it. He died. Twenty ate him up. They died. Four hundred ate those 20, and they died. Eight thousand ate those 400, and they died. A hundred and sixty thousand ate those 8000, and died, and the farmer was troubled no more. In its flight from the Mississippi valley, the name of the statistician of this story has become separated from his figures, but the fact that the incident occurred in Missouri is regarded as evidence of its possibility.

Attention is called to the ad of Moore & Co., bankers, in this issue. The bank was opened for business last week under the management of Thos. B. Montgomery, of Portland, who has proven quite an acquisition to our growing town. W. H. and H. A. Moore, E. E. Lytle and T. B. Montgomery are interested in the Goldendale bank, thus making it one of the strongest in the Inland Empire. It is hoped our people, who have heretofore done their banking business outside of the county, will patronize Klickitat's only banking institution.—Goldendale Sentinel.

The Indians claim that big game is getting so scarce that it is hardly worth their while to go on their fall hunt. They say it will not be very long before there will be practically no game in all this big country, where once there was lots of it. The Indian is right. The poacher and pot-hunter prowls at all times with gun in hand, ready to shoot whatever comes in his way regardless of season.

The last instance of American engineering enterprise is the construction of a magnificent bridge across the Nile at Athbara, in the heart of Africa. The contract was secured by a Philadelphia firm from the Egyptian government.

It is stated, in support of vaccination, that in Austria, prior to vaccination becoming general, out of every million inhabitants, 38,541 died of smallpox within a period of thirty years; a figure reduced to one-tenth, namely, 3,745, in the corresponding time after the general adoption of vaccination.

Magistrate—"Do you mean to say the lady swore at you when you stepped on her skirt?" Fitz William—"Yes, your honor; only she done it with her eyes."

STOCKMEN, ATTENTION!

The Fegian mother, instead of having recourse to the spank, when she wants to correct her dusky offspring, takes a bite out of some part of the child's body, generally choosing the fleshy part of the arm for the operation.

F. Eastbrooks, after an absence of a year and a half, made a trip to Portland to see his family and shake hands with his host of friends in that city. Until we read the following in the Oregonian, we were not aware that we had the pleasure of having such an important personage on the LEADER staff:

"OLD-TIMER VISITS PORTLAND.—Frank Eastbrooks, one of the old-time printers of this city, who was connected with The Oregonian composing-room for over 30 years, and was known to the later generation of printers as "Dad," dropped in last night to make a friendly call on the force. He has been in charge of the mechanical department of the Moro (Sherman county) LEADER for the past year and a half, and is in the city on a brief visit to attend to some business and see his children, one of whom is employed in the composing-room of The Oregonian. "Dad" is looking well. The salubrious climate of Sherman county has benefited his health, and if the frosts of that elevated region had not whitened his flowing beard slightly, he would show no trace of the passing years."

R. & N. connections for east and west-bound through passengers via Granger or Ogden. Read This, Consumptives

"From the way my wife coughed for six months, I knew she had consumption. She showed it in her face, too, and her body wasted away to a mere skeleton. After she got down in bed the doctors couldn't do any good. I called in both Dr. T. A. Shannon and Dr. N. L. Hawson, each of whom is a first-class doctor; but they had nothing that would cure the trouble in her lungs. My wife's father came to see her one day, when she got very low. He lives in Cedar Lake, Wis., while we live in Rice Lake, Wis. He said he knew what was needed, and made me get a bottle of Acker's English Remedy for Consumption. I went to Schmidt's, our local druggist, and got a bottle, and it helped her right away. She took eight soc. bottles, and they put her back on her feet and made her as sound and well as any woman in town. She has taken on flesh again, she doesn't cough, and if any one who doesn't know the facts was to be told she was no near death with consumption, he wouldn't believe it. My wife does all her housework, and at night sleeps as soundly as you please. Her stomach no longer gives her any trouble at all. Maybe you doubt what I am telling. If so, I advise you to see J. N. Schmidt, the druggist who sold me Acker's English Remedy for Consumption. He'll tell you the same thing. He it is sold on a guarantee to cure, or money returned, and he never yet had a bottle come back to his store, although he has sold hundreds of them. My name is Luther Dedell, Rice Lake, Wis."
