YOUNG LADY'S SAD EXPERIENCE.

SHE THOUGHT IT WAS FORTUNE-TELLING.

A very funny story was told yesterday by Stynes, the electric doctor, about a young lady who came to him while at Astoria to have her fortune told by electricity. She had heard of his remarkable ability in reading diseases by that method, and must have presumed the rest.

When accosted the doctor said: "Why, Miss, I am not a fortune-teller." "Oh! you are not. I am so sorry, for I wanted to know who I was going to marry." To this Stynes smilingly replied: "That would be hard to tell; it might be Tom, Dick or Harry, for all I know." "Oh! doctor," exclaimed the young lady in surprise, "How did you know all their names?"

The electric doctor gave two interesting lectures this week at the Opera House to a large and well-pleased audience. As well as being a fluent speaker that appeals to the intelligence of his hearers, he has a way of putting bright comedy into his lines that at times brought roars of laughter. He is never unreasonable in his claims, and promises nothing but what he feels can be accomplished. When he treats sickness by electricity he simply practices what scientific research has taught him.

Nervous and chronic diseases of both men and women can be cured by electricity, and cured to stay.

Stynes has a method of reading disease by electricity whereby he tells sick people the true condition of every organ in the human anatomy. He finds defects, and will describe your condition to you without asking a single question. He will remain in Moro this week only, and can be consulted at his office at the City Hotel until including Saturday, Oct. 28. Advice and Electrical Disease reading free. Call early.
