Grass Valley High School

BARBARA WALPOLE, Editor

The Wasco Warriors defeated the Grass Valley Tigers in the first game Friday night at the Rufus Tournament. The game was fast and exciting from start to finish. At the end of the first quarter the Tigers were ahead 6 to 4 and at the half the score was nine all. At the beginning of the second half the Tigers ran up an eight point lead before the Warriors could wake up and they kept from 4 to 8 points ahead until the last two minutes when Wasco came to within two points of our score. With about ten seconds left to play Spencer, Wasco's stationary guard, made a wild shot from back of center thus tying the score 22 all this was the score when the whistle blew. In the three minutes overtime period the Warriors made three points while the best the Tigers could gather in was two. When the game ended the score was 25—24 in Wasco's favor. Welch, one of Wasco's forwards, was put out on fouls in the overtime period. The lineup was:

Grass Valley		Wasco
Vintin	F	Welch
Alley	F	Williams
Barnett	C	Richelderfer
Blagg	G	Watkins
Poley	G	Spencer

Referee—Watson.

OLD LAW VOIDED MARRIAGE IF GENTLEMAN WAS VAMPED

English Women Forbidden to Lure Husbands With Perfumes and Iron Stays.

New York.—While America was declaring independence in 1776, the English parliament was attempting by law to make men independent of the wiles of vamping ladies. The law held vamps liable to the punishment accorded witches, but there isn't any record that it succeeded in accomplishing much.

The law, solemnly passed by parliament, is reprinted in Aromatics Magazine. It goes thus:

"That all women, of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether maids or widows, that shall, from and after such Act, impose upon and betray into matrimony, any of his majesty's subjects, by the use of scents, paints, cosmetic washes, artificial teeth, false hair, iron stays, hooks, high-heeled shoes, bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the law in force against witchcraft and like misdemeanors, and that the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void."

In the century and a half since that law was passed, things have changed considerably. Not only do men enjoy the fragrance of good perfume about their womenfolk, but they are beginning to use scent themselves.

"Many of the Anglo-Saxon race are prone to carry the impression that it isn't manly for one of the male sex to use perfume," says Aromatics. "Nevertheless, men are using more perfumes and cosmetics than in former years and several manufacturers are successfully marketing lines of toilet preparations made especially for men."

In general, the article says, men prefer the simpler floral fragrances, such as lilac, lavender, carnation and rose. Women are reported active in converting their male friends to the use of scents.

Ganders Replace Dogs as Guards of Poultry

each week a newspaper that will be a credit to all Sherman county and the immediate family of friends of each of the two newspapers that are being consolidated into one business.

C. L. Ireland, editor of the Sherman County Observer since the death of his father in January, 1913, and manager of the newspaper since having bought the Observer property in June, 1894, in partnership with his father, D. C. Ireland, and brother, F. C. Ireland now living in Portland, is retiring from active newspaper work in Sherman county. Just where we will locate in the future is not certain at this time, although we have under consideration some very good business opportunities.

It is 37 years this June since C. L. Ireland first became identified with Sherman county through purchase with his father of the Observer then published at Moro. At that time his father was confidential field man for Paul Mohr, a millionaire mining capitalist of Spokane who was interested in opening the Columbia river to barge and steamer service with portage for freight over short railroad lines at Celilo Falls and the Cascades of the Columbia river. It was Mohr's idea to build short lines of railroads into the interior from the Columbia river to provide freight for the boat line and a paper was needed for this purpose.

Gus Mohr, brother of Paul Mohr and county surveyor for Wasco county for a number of years after 1894, made the survey for a railroad from Biggs south to as far as Wasco for his brother. This later was built by E. E. Lytle and associates, using the field notes made by Gus Mohr after the panic of 1894 had taken a heavy toll from the Paul Mohr fortunes.

During our residence in Sherman county we have seen the county grow from its pioneer era into the present condition of modern highways, its market roads system, and the railroad that serves all its communities from north to south.

We have chronicled the family happenings to some extent of nearly every family in Sherman county; weddings, births, and death that comes to all, until now there are very few names of people in this county that are not familiar to the publisher of the Sherman County Observer. To these we must now say good bye, at least in a newspaper sense. We wish to thank every one who has helped in the past to make the Sherman County Observer a real county family newspaper and would apreciate it if this same helpfulness be given to Mr. French and the combination of the two newspaper properties to be known in the future as the Sherman County Journal.

We close by stating that all bills and accounts due the Sherman County Observer up to March 1st, 1831, is to be paid to C. L. Ireland who will also pay all accounts owing by the Sherman County Observer. Paid in advance subscriptions will be continued to their expiration date with the Sherman County Journal.

—C. L. Ireland.

This Is a Good Story Whether True or Not

Berlin.—An animal story fit to make animal psychologists dance with joy, and animal lovers in general weep with emotion, is that which has become the topic of conversation of Adolf Schmidt.

Mr. Schmidt and his pet shepherd dog, Nora, were taking a typically German walk, leisurely and systematically, along the shores of the Teltow canal, and the master was teaching Nora to retrieve, when suddenly a pigeon, wearing a red ring on its foot, fluttered down at the nose of the dog.

Mr. Schmidt, thinking the bird was injured, ran nearer and beheld a strange sight. Nora, instead of snapping at the pigeon, carefully lay down, rolled herself into a ball so that only the head of the carrier pigeon was visible, and proceeded to lick and deftly nuzzle the bird most reassuringly.

Then Mr. Schmidt saw the cause of the strange antics of the animals. A dark shadow flitted over the group and a pigeon hawk circled low and lower. The dog growled. The pigeon buried its head deeper in the dog's flank. The hawk flew away. So did the pigeon, and Nora calmly went back to retrieving.
