 the death of Victor Lawson.

Velvet-Clad Youth in Style Revue

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WELL, well, who comes here, promenading along fashion's highway with all the poise and assurance of a sophisticated grown-up who glories in a feeling of being well-dressed? This none other than the younger generation ranging from tiny tot to self-important Miss Junior, and you can tell at a glance that, like their elder sisters and their cousins and their aunts not to forget to mention mothers dear, they, too, have become decidedly velvet-conscious this season.

There is no doubt about it, that to the very young, fashion is broadcasting the message of velvet with as much emphasis as to those older. The favor for velvet in the juvenile world has reached such a high point of enthusiasm designers are not only exploiting it for coats and frocks but in a trimming way as well as for cunning accessory items it is regarded as a medium of outstanding importance.

For instance, with their costumes of gay wool waves, little girls are wearing dazling muff, beret and scarf sets made of velvet, often shirred as fanciful as you please or perhaps touched up with a bit of fur. Mothers who are deft with the needle and who are gifted with a sense of imagination when it comes to designing will not doubt be intrigued with the idea of fashioning these cunning "sets" for their little ones. It's really surprising what a yard or so of velvet thus manipulated can do in the way of adding chic, charm and "class" to a little girl's costume.</
