CLIPPED FROM OUR CONTEMPORARIES

J. P. Yates, Wasco, Oregon, Republican candidate for state senator Sherman, Gilliam and Wheeler counties. Pledged to the development of the Columbia river for power and navigation. Lower rates on wheat and livestock. Lower taxes. Less governmental expense.

That's as good a way as any to start this story about one of this district's two candidates for the state senate. It was copied from his own campaign card. But the voter should also know that J. P. Yates has served this legislative district in the house of representatives in a manner that has commanded the respect of his associates in the house and from his constituents.

Quiet, dignified, alert, a keen student of public questions, Yates is never overlooked when important legislation is up for consideration. His committee assignments in the last session were bills and mailing, administration and reorganization, enrolled and engrossed bills, roads and highways, ways and means, railroads and transportation.

In the matter of rail rates, Yates is one of the best informed men in the legislature. He has long battled for more reasonable freight rates for the wheat shipper. Irregularities, like 22 1/2 cents from Condon to Portland compared with 19 cents from Walla Walla to Portland, rankle the Yates temperament. And why shouldn't it, since he owns 1200 acres of Sherman county wheat land?

Mr. Yates' parents came to Oregon in 1883, from Illinois, and settled near Eugene. He moved to Sherman county in 1898, where J. P. has since resided; attended a business college; conducted a retail lumber business 25 years; now in general merchandise business; married; two terms mayor of Wasco; Mason Shriner and a lover of home and flowers.

Has strong support—almost unanimous of Sherman county people, who know him best. They believe in Yates and think it is Sherman's turn at the senatorship—formerly filled for years by Gilliam and Wheeler county men—Condon Globe Times. George G. Updegraff, who was born at Chippewa Falls, Wis., October 24, 1898, is attorney for state land board for Sherman county, with headquarters at Moro. "My father was a railroad man," I was three months old until we came said Mr. Updegraff. "From the time to Oregon on December 31, 1915, we were constantly on the go. Sometimes we spent a few weeks in a place and at other times his work would keep him in one place for several months. We traveled all over the country. Curiously enough, when Father came to Portland he decided that Portland was the place he had always been looking for, and he felt no urge to go elsewhere. When I was 15 years old we were living at Pocatello. I decided to quit school, much to my mother's disgust. I landed a job running a pipe lathe in the railroad shops there. When we came to Portland I started to school at the Christian Brothers Business college. After graduating from this institution I worked as a stenographer. I resigned my position to don the uniform of Uncle Sam during the World War. After I was mustered out I went to Corvallis and attended Oregon State college for three years. I earned my expenses while at college by doing stenographic work on Saturdays and after school for some years in Oregon State College. I decided to take up law; so I went to Stanford university, graduating there in 1926. I was admitted to the bar in California and returning to Oregon I took the bar examination here and was admitted. I worked for the Title & Trust company in Portland till September, 1927, when Governor I. L. Patterson appointed me district attorney of Sherman county. "I was married on September 17, 1931, at Stanford university to Miss Helen Gridley."—The Portland, Oregon Journal.
