FREIGHT

As the time for harvest grows nearer farmers are beginning to wonder more than ever what the railroads are going to do about the rates to be charged for transporting wheat to Portland this year.

The INTERstate rate is set by the United States Interstate Commerce Commission and it allows railroads to charge from 13 and a half cents per hundred to 22 and a half cents per hundred from points of this branch.

Due to the danger of truck competition the railroads would apparently like to make some concessions to shippers of wheat. That is, the executives in the west would like to make some concessions, but have so far been unable to do so.

In the meantime the building of the warehouse and dock at Big Eddy goes merrily on and the river boats are getting ready for the handling of wheat in great quantities this summer and fall.

But regardless of the fact many farmers will arrange to have their wheat hauled by other means than the railroad unless rates are reduced, they still would like to see the railroads stay in business and continue to haul the wheat.

The meeting next Tuesday at the court house will serve to explain to wheat growers of this county what must be done to get their wheat to market at the lowest rate.

HO HUM

Our friends in The Dalles seem to be of the opinion that the Indians at Cello should be in neat little white cottages, bathed in little white bathtubs and deodorized with satchet powder to make them attractive to the tourist trade.

It just doesn't seem possible that the great American tourist is going to travel clear across the continent to see an Indian if said Indian is conducting himself just like a white man, wearing the same clothes, living in the same sort of houses, cooking his salmon on a stove instead of drying it by a sage brush fire.

We have taken the Indian land—though what for puzzles us in times like these—and now we debate among ourselves how we can treat him to make himself and his family the best asset from a commercial point of view.

What a despicable group of grafting hangers-on have attached themselves to the Lindbergh case for graft. The dollar sign seems to have obliterated personal morals entirely.

Now I ask you, ain't that a civilized way to quell a riot? 88 dead 906 injured. And it seems that every dead Indian is another reason why England cannot hold India.

There is no depression in fish stories. An Idaho man reports that he shot a bass out of a tree.

Now we may look forward to a short stretch of time in which the human hand may be used for work instead of handshaking.

If a meone in authority will put in an order for a big June rain sometime soon Sherman county can promise to deliver a crop of wheat.

People's Column

To the Editor:

I note with disapproval, your comment in regard to considering W. J. Kerr for Chancellor of the combined state educational institutions. I consider your comment due to lack of personal knowledge of the man.

I do not believe Dr. W. J. Kerr would be partial. I believe he would use his creative ability to build up the University with the same intense energy that he has used in building up the Oregon State College.

Applicants must show that they have completed at least one year of study in the regular four year course in agriculture at a college or university of recognized standing, or that they have been graduated from a four year agricultural course at a standard high school.

The register of eligibles will be divided as follows: (a) General farming, including dairying; (b) stock raising under range conditions; (c) irrigation farming; (d) dry farming.

STANDING IN THE CHURCH BREAD LINE

By J. C. Jackson

A real estate man in Lexington, Ky., once sold me a house. He took me through it from cellar to attic, and then got me into his automobile and drove around in the immediate vicinity.

These were his arguments why this section of the city was a good section to live in; it had pleasant surroundings, it had a good school, it had good fire protection, it had good police protection, it had splendid churches, and there was one of my own faith and order in which I could worship.

The deal was clinched and I moved in. As a citizen of the city, I contributed my share to the maintenance of the school; I contributed my share to the maintenance of the park; I contributed my share to the maintenance of the fire department; but for several months I contributed nothing to the Church.

I grew ashamed. I said to myself, "My property is a better investment because the Church is nearby. If death or trouble should come to my home, I would not hesitate to call on the pastor, and he would never refuse to come. I accept all of these benefits which make my home desirable, and contribute to them all except the Church, to which I am contributing nothing."

So I grew ashamed of taking so much and giving nothing at all, of stading in the Church's bread line.

Many Christians would feel as I did if they would think the thing through. Every community has people who are getting something for nothing at the expense of the Church.

Assault and Battery

A chap was arrested for assault and battery. The judge asked him, his name, occupation, and what he was charged with.

"My name is Sparrs, I am an electrician, and I am charged with battery."

"Officer, put this man in a dry cell."—Clipped.

A traveling man one night found himself obliged to remain in a small town on account of a washout on the railroad caused by the heavy rain, which was still coming down in torrents.

"This certainly looks like the flood." "The what?"

"The flood. You've read about the Flood, and the Ark landing on Mt. Ararat, surely?"

"Gee, mister, she returned, I ain't seen a paper for three days."—Mead Cooperation.

Saving The Pieces

Well, George, said a country clergyman to an old man who sat by the wayside breaking stones, "That pile doesn't seem to get any less."

"No pastor," said the old man, "them stones is like the Ten Commandments, yer can go on breaking 'em, but yer can't get rid of 'em."
