

THIRTEEN MEASURES

ed state grange water power amendment were among the last to reach the state department. This amendment relates to the control and development of water power and water power sites, both by the state and the state in conjunction with the federal government.

The initiative measure sponsored by the Oregon Highway Protective Association provides for the classification of busses and trucks, with relation to weight, increases the fees and eliminates trailers in cases where the combined weight of the vehicle and load exceeds 3000 pounds.

Repeal of the state prohibition laws is provided in an initiative measure sponsored by Harry B. Chritchlow of Portland, and for which petitions have been completed.

The taxpayers' voting qualification amendment, providing that all persons voting on tax levies and bond issues shall be tax payers, is also complete and ready for the ballot.

Another proposed constitutional amendment referred by the legislature authorizes criminal trials without jury by consent of the accused person. This amendment was fathered in the 1931 session by Senator Crawford of Multnomah county.

A third proposed amendment provides that the 6 per cent limitation provision may be applied to levies of any one of three previous years, instead of the preceding year.

There also will be on the ballot three referendum measures attacking acts approved by the 1931 legislature.

One is directed at the 1931 legislative act which prohibits commercial fishing on the Rogue river. Another attacks the legislative act providing a tax of 10 cents a pound on all oleomargarine manufactured and sold in the state of Oregon. The third referendum directed at the legislative assembly is aimed at the act appropriating approximately $1,182,000 for the support of the higher educational institutions.

Delicious Worry

After seeing the new transparent dresses on the streets, the Inspector is worried stiff for fear that the girls will hear about cellophane. Jap says ti's hardly worth while for a girl to win a bathing beauty contest these days. The judges can't find anything on which to pin a blue ribbon.
