STATION THRESHING

The chaff is tossed out the end of the chute and the wheat drops into a box. From there it is screened and blown out by another man acting the part of the sieves of a thresher. He passes it to the sacksewer who places it in the little sacks accompanied by the label that was placed on the bundle when it was cut in the field.

Before seeding time each little sackful must be recleaned, weighed, and the weight recorded so that the yield of the particular row from which it was taken can be computed. Varieties that show poor yields or other unfavorable characteristics for a period of three years are discarded and their place taken by some of the new hybrids or selections always being developed at the station.

It is a comparatively easy matter to test out the yield of a few kinds of wheat. Almost anyone can do it, but when the varieties run into the thousands the experiments require almost unlimited patience, checking and double checking as well as a lot of just plain adding and dividing to determine what varieties of wheat are adaptable to the sections where the wheat is being grown.

Mr. Stephens states that the results of the nursery plots almost always check with the results derived when the same wheats are grown in test plots of considerably more acreage, proving that the system of threshing is ordinarily accurate even though it does entail so much care in keeping the wheats and their tags straight.

Some wheats however, do a trifle better when grown in plots and some yield better in individual rows.

Recently there was a distinct earthquake shock which disturbed a small western city and rocked the municipal building so that the Councilmen, then in session, left without the usual ceremonies.

The clerk, a man of rules and regulations, was hard put to give his minutes the proper official tone. Finally he evolved this masterpiece, "On motion of the City Hall, the Council adjourned."—The American Boy.

Poor Showmanship

Barney, the junior partner, burst into the senior partner's room and banged on the desk.

"Our showroom manager! We must dismiss him at once."

"Calm yourself," said the senior partner. "What's happened?"

"He has put a testimonial praising our typewriters on the showroom window, and it is written with a fountain pen," Barney explained.

Tit-bits.

Cleaned Up

Aunt: "Which one of you children ate the grapes I had in the cupboard? No use denying it—I saw the seeds and skins on the floor."

Ronald: "It wasn't me, Auntie, 'cause I ate the skins, seeds and all."

Sophisticated

A newly married woman was shopping, and was determined that the grocer should not take advantage of her youth and inexperience.

"Don't you think these eggs are very small?" she said critically.

"I do," answered the grocer, "but that's the kind the farmer sends me."

STRIPES IN VOGUE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Stripes are much in the mode this season. They run up and down in vertical lines, they slant diagonally, or they go horizontally, or the designer works them together in clever effects. The shirtwaist suit of striped wash silk or of striped seersucker is in the very foreground of sports fashions. The model pictured is of silk, brown and white if you please, for the combination is a most popular one at the present moment. Stripes do tricky things this season. Such as forming insets after the manner adopted in going and paneling the shirt as here pictured. Other examples of the doings of stripes are the amusing seerucker jacket suits which are asprising to look military with their fastening of shiny nickel buttons. The blouse of navy and white lawn which is trimmed with metal buttons is also a leading style item.
