

PENDLETON ROUND-UP PARADE HISTORICAL

Pendleton, Ore. (Special).—"Westward Ho!"

This cry ran up and down the east bank of the lower Mississippi river early in the nineteenth century as wagon trains rolled slowly west into a land whose gold was reflected in the setting sun.

This trek of courageous pioneers to the west has an echo in "Westward Ho!" the parade which is one of the features of the Pendleton Round-Up, September 8, 9, and 10. In this spectacle of western history there passes in review cowboys, representing the wild, carefree life of the plains; the covered wagons, which carried their precious burden of women and children; outriders of the wagon trains on whose vigilance depended the life of every person in the little traveling community; Indians in bright war paint, whose forays dotted the western trail with graves, and stage coaches which later careened over these same highways carrying gold bullion and adventure-some travelers.

Westward Ho parade will be held Saturday, last day of the Round-Up, and as it swings past will present to view a cross section of life when the West was the Great Adventure.

Oddly enough this parade crosses that trail known as the Oregon Trail, traversed by the earliest pioneers who ventured into the Northwest.

Some of the coaches appearing in the parade were in active service on the old trails as early as 1850. These are owned by the Round-Up association and preserved for their historical value.

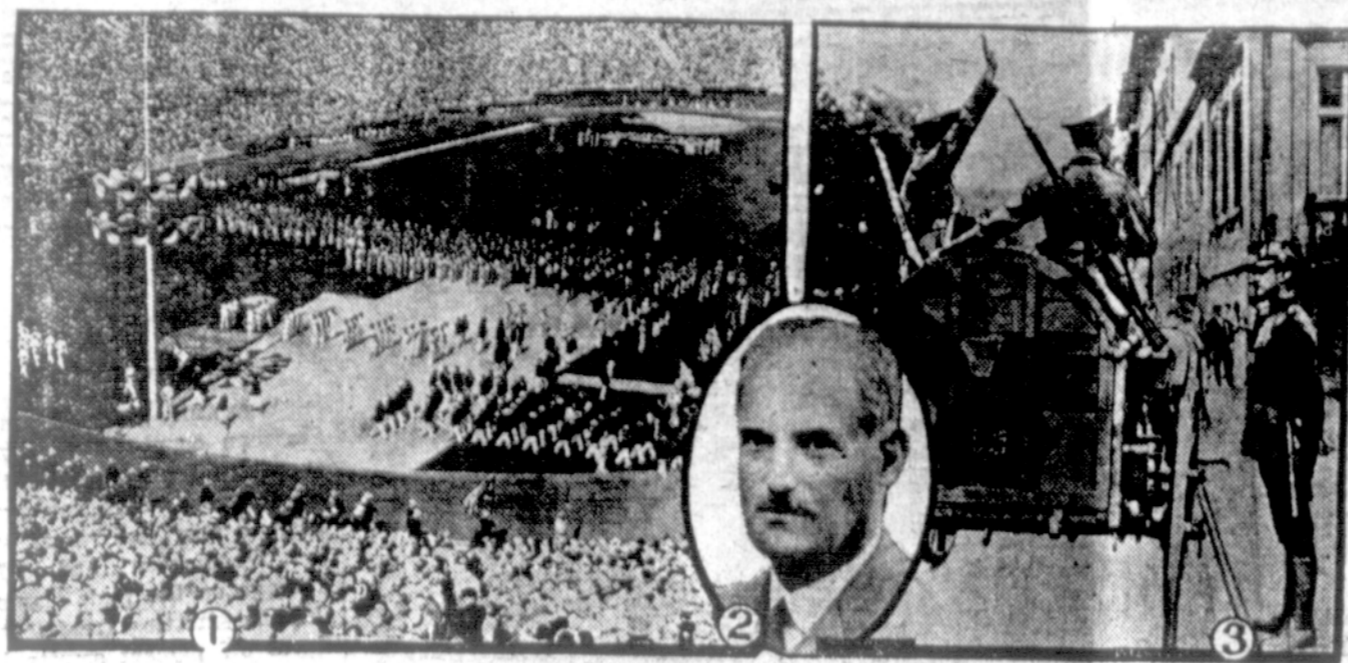

The Round-Up this year has an added significance in the fact that representatives of the American Legion from all parts of the United States will stop off here for the western epic on their way to Portland for the national convention of the Legion, September 12-15.

OREGON LIGHT HOGS MUCH IN DEMAND

Oregon hog raisers have been marketing 64 per cent of their hogs at the most desirable weight in Portland, and 42 per cent at the desirable weight at Willamette valley points, according to a study recently made by the animal husbandry department at the Oregon State college experiment station. The report on the study has just been issued as station bulletin No. 287.

"The market demand for a leaner type of hog is the result of falling off of export demand for lard and diminished use of this product in this country, and of the desire of consumers for leaner cuts," say the authors. H. A. Lindgren, A. W. Oliver and E. L. Potter.

The college was requested to make a study of the radical change that took place in demand and consider both the angle of consumer demand and the possibility of the grower making the maximum profit in raising hogs that best suit the trade.

The investigators found that the most desirable type at present is the hog that weight 160 to 200 pounds and has a hard finish free from excessive lardiness. Hogs weighing more than 200 pound sold for 50 cents to $1 less than the lighter ones.

Hogs too thin in flesh are also discounted about the same amount as those somewhat too heavy. Actual observation of the market revealed that when there was a light run of hogs buyers paid little attention to these variations in weight or finish.

Hogs weighing more than 200 pounds put on a larger daily gain but require more grain to make one pound of gain than the lighter weight hogs, the production phase of the study shows. To grower is justified in producing the slightly heavier 200 to 225 pound hog when 100 pounds of live hog bring as much as the cost of 690 pounds of grain.

HUCKLEBERRY RECIPES

Twenty different ways to use that plentiful wild fruit, the huckleberry, have been chosen, tested and recently issued by the home economics extension service at Oregon State College for housewives to use in preparing this cost product for their tables.

The list is a compilation from the many recipes sent to Miss Claribel Nye, state leader of home economics extension, as a result of a public invitation for anyone to send in his favorite recipes for using this native fruit. Replies came from 13 counties in Oregon, Washington and California. These recipes and others from various sources were tested in the college cooking laboratory by staff

The Motorist's Daughter

A little girl was crossing the Atlantic with her mother. It was her first ocean trip. The sea was as smooth as the proverbial millpond for the first three days, then the ship began rolling and pitching heavily.

The child could not understand what had happened. "Mamma," she cried. "What's the matter? Are we on a detour?"

The Retort Courteous

The honeymooners were driving through the country when they met a farmer leading a mule. Just as

Huckleberry Cottage Pudding
One third cup butter
One cup sugar
One egg
One half cup milk
One and three-fourth cup flour
Three teaspoons baking powder
Cream the butter, add sugar gradually, add egg well beaten; mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt; add alternately with milk to first mixture. Place sweetened canned or fresh huckleberries in bottom of cake pan and pour cake batter over them and bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) 35 minutes. Serve with cream.

Huckleberry Zip
One package lemon gelatin
One cup huckleberry juice
One cup boiling water.
Dissolve gelatin in boiling water, add huckleberry juice, chill. When slightly thickened, beat with rotary egg beater until of consistency of whipped cream. Pile in sherbet glasses, chill until firm. This may be varied by adding a few whole berries to the whip; also by adding a cup of cream.

Huckleberry Jam
One pound huckleberries
