not forget that their own health is most important, not only to themselves, but also to their families. The care of a sick husband or of a delicate child can cause them more care and sorrow than anything else. Prevent these illnesses where possible and conserve your own health and happiness as well as theirs, not to mention the saving on the family purse.

Many yet do not understand the economy of having their physician make periodical physical examinations of all members of their family, especially the children. No one doubts the wisdom of seeing the family dentist regularly. If it is admitted, and it is, that the teeth should be examined at regular intervals, how much more is it necessary to have the whole body examined regularly to find out if any decay has already started in any part.

It is much cheaper to pay to be kept well than to pay the cost of being made well after you are sick. Here is one place where business methods in the home will reap dividends in actual cash as well as in better health and a happier family.

ENGLISH TWEED

By CHERRIE NICHOLAS

This typically English tweed suit in black and white check is exquisitely tailored. Isabel of London, court dressmaker, sponsors it. There is a "touch that tells" in the detail of the pocket and the design at the top of the sleeves. White ocean pearl buttons sewn through with black faille trim the deep collar of the white marocain jumper. A necklace of overlapping pearl leaves is appropriately worn with the costume. Now that there is such a wide selection of ocean pearl button, clips and buckles dyed in fashionable colors to be had, the outlook is for their lavish use this fall. Elaborately designed styles which introduce marcasite or rhinestone greatly increase the scope of this attractive type of trimming.
