DE MOSS FUNERAL

Pinkerton sang two songs composed by the deceased and Tom Fraser's solo was composed by Rev. James DeMoss, father of the deceased.

The following poem was written by Henry DeMoss:

Oh, childhood so merry and spring-time so cheery
With the pansies and daisies and wild flowers grow,
Deash came without warning and left us in mourning
And claimed little May in sepulcher low.
Then we crossed o'er the mountains

the shadowy mountains,
The Siskiyou mountains, so lonely to me.

The hopeful and fairest the brightest and rarest.
Let the roses and lillies and Oranges bloom;
The bride in her gladness must leave us in sadness
And dear sister Minnie is placed in the tomb,
And we passed o'er the mountains the shadowy mountains

The Siskiyou mountains so lonely to me.
A life full of beauty of kindness and duty.
Let the oak and the cedar majestically sway,
How fondly we loved her, none other above her,
And our sweet darling mother in the tomb laid away,
And we passed o'er the mountains the shadowy mountains

The Siskiyou mountains so lonely to me.
A career marked with splendor, God fearing and tender.
Let the fir and the palm tree triumphantly wave,
To his bright cheerful smile bid adieu for awhile
For the form of our George must be placed in the grave.
And we've passed o'er the mountains the shadowy mountains

The Siskiyou mountains so lonely to me.
Composed zby Henry DeMoss.
