DEFLATION

Deflation goes on steadily every day while government and business talks inflation, reflation and other plans to stop the downward whirl. We hail with great glee news that some business we are not interested in is being deflated farther and we cry aloud to the government for help when our own affairs suffer the same fate. It seems that every week another industry is joining in the great parade toward deflation and readjustment.

Note the glee that has been brought about by the announcement that the railroads will be combined under a dictator or some sort and that consolidations and economics will be enforced. It is estimated that such a move will throw thousands of railroad men out of a job and, within a short time, on to the relief agencies.

Note the joy with which the ordinary man receives the news that there will be no more loans to insurance companies with highly paid executives. Insurance companies have to a large extent escaped the popular disapproval so far, but the recent disclosure of the high salaries paid to officers and their refusal to loan money on policies has put them on the spot and the failure of some of the weaker ones may follow, unless there is a change making it possible for them to collect on their collateral.

We are slowly and painfully cleaning up the mess. Government may praise inflation and pass bills to make it possible but the forces of deflation are still ascendent. One industry after another is brought before the bar of public opinion through some flagrant violation of law and before it is finished the entire group has been investigated and examined and in most cases reorganized—in short deflated in capital and pride.

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY

It has always been a characteristic of graduates to consider the world their oyster. They are popularly supposed to be ready shortly after commencement day to begin rebuilding the old world to suit their new and modern tastes. The elders are much given to frowning at this show of conceit and the jokes about the sophomoric wisdom of the young are among the most numerous of any classification of jokes.

It may be that present conditions will somewhat tend to change the conceit of the elders, even as they have always sought to alter the conceit of youth. It would be unseemingly for the generation which is in power to boast with any show of superiority about its accomplishments and to bid the coming generation to follow carefully the beaten path. Rather, we think, should the elders look upon the younger folks who are finishing their formal schooling as possible allies in the fight against the evils that have become apparent in our civilization.

It is apparent that the philosophies we have built on are inadequate. They do not fit the present day conditions. We may have to change our most basic ideas before we can recover our economic and social poise. We may even have to drop our allegiance to individualism, to free competition in business and to some other of our national fetishes before it is over and the support of those who are not afraid to break with the past may be needed.

A news item reports that retired ministers are sometimes strengthened by doses of whiskey. Imagine preaching fire and brimstone for forty years only to wind up drinking it.

We understood that the Veteran's Hospital at Portland was built to be used not as a monument. With so many persons in need of hospitalization it should be kept full. The government can perform no greater service to the people than to give a means to health and it may be that some day government hospitals will be available for everyone. We believe, this was the plan back of the government hospitals for veterans and it should be continued.

The man who directed the militia to fire on those Wisconsin farmers should have thought first of his history and recalled what happened to one who ordered soldiers to fire on a group of embattled farmers back in Lexington.

After reading an account of the Kansas wind storm it is plain that we live in a calm country after all and we like the weather. Thank you. It seems much better now.

The state of California in refusing to prosecute Mooney certainly showed a lack of courage of its convictions.

The old song, "It's a long way back home, take plenty of shoes" don't apply to the veterans this year with the government providing railroad fares and gasoline money.

A secretary of the treasury could get helpful training by taking the place of the carnival negro who sticks his head through a canvas for the boys to throw at.

Grass Valley

O. P. King has returned from California for the summer as a positive sign that that season has at last arrived. Mr. King has already been fishing, of course.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Jacobs, of Lakeview, were here one night this week while on their way to Portland. Miss Maude Homewood came with them as far as Grass Valley having finished her school at Adel.

Born: To Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Powers Sunday May 21, a bouncing baby boy. The Powers are at the A. E. Eslinger ranch.

The Baker family had a reunion at Hood River last Sunday which was attended by representatives of the family from Portland, Grass Valley and Fossil.

Gus Engstrom was in The Dalles Tuesday.

The state president of the Rebekah lodge will be in Grass Valley next Tuesday evening to hold a joint meeting with the local lodge and the Kent lodge.

G. E. Garn, a resident of The Dalles may thank his luck for being alive. Last Sunday he stumbled and fell into the river by the eddy where most of the salmon fishing is done. His head struck the ledge and he was knocked unconscious and drifted out into the eddy. He was rescued by Mr. Thompson of Moupin. Mr. Garn is the second man to fall into the Deschutes this spring at the fishing grounds.

Wayne Spoor has rented the Engel house and moved his family here from Molalla. He is trucking material for Tum-a-Lum Co. and also makes trips with stock.

A tea was given for Mrs. Martha McGowan Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arne Annula. It was largely attended by the ladies of the town.

Luke Bibby was here from Heppner over the week end and Art was here from Portland.

An enjoyable dance was held here Saturday night.

WASCO CHURCH

As a church we have tried to show ourselves interested in the problems that puzzle and effect the lives of people today. We feel sure that the three men who came to Wasco to help our institute, Professor W. C. Jones, J. J. Handsaker and W. M. Richards have not only left their impress upon our thinking, but have made us richer for having known them. Already we are beginning to consider an institute of similar nature for next year.

Mr. William E. Johnson, otherwise known as "Pussyfoot" Johnson, a nationally known fighter for Prohibition, and Mr. Thomas W. Gales, Assistant to the General Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, were both in Wasco Thursday morning for addresses at the church and the school.

The Wasco High School Baccalaureate will be held at the Methodist church Sunday morning.

Reliability is our watchword

H. Zeigler's Quality Store

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

May 15, 1933

Time and again I am told—by my own organization and by others—that I penalize myself by quality.

Friendly critics protest our putting into the Ford V-8 what they call "twenty-year steel." They say such quality is not necessary; the public does not expect it; and that the public does not know the difference anyway.

But I know the difference.

I know that the car a man sees is not the car he drives—he drives the car which the engineer sees. The car which is seen, comprises beauty of design, color and attractive accessories,—all desirable, of course. The best evidence that we think so is that they are all found on the Ford V-8.

But these are not the car. The car proper, which is the basis of all the rest, is the type of engine and its reliability; the structure of chassis and body, ruggedly durable; the long thought and experiment given to safety factors; the steady development of comfort, convenience and economy. These make the car.

A car can be built that will last two or three years. But we have never built one. We want the basic material of our car to be as dependable the day it is discarded as the day it is bought. Ford cars built 15 years ago are still on the road. It costs more to build a durable car—but two items we do not skimp are cost and conscience. A great many things could "get by"—the public would never know the difference. But we would know.

The new Ford V-8 is a car that I endorse without any hesitancy. I know what is in it. I trust our whole thirty years' reputation with it. It is even better than our previous V-8. It is larger, more rugged and mechanically a better job all round.

I readily say this in an advertisement because I know the car will back it up.
