BASEBALL GAMES

The second and Manning who had just finished a nine inning game relieved him. He did very well until the 7th when he allowed 12 runs.

Shawaway, manager for the R. A. C. Chief. (R. A. C. stands for Reservation Athletic Club) had a hard boiled and unflinching system of keeping up the morale of his team. When ever a player slumped or showed lack of interest Shawaway, from his position at short trotted over to the third base foul line and called another player from the bench and the lazy one went to the showers. The Indians kept up their pep remarkably well considering the discouraging score.

The players were a good bunch of natives and their excellent conduct was commented on by many of those who attended the game. It is probable that they will play in Grass Valley again later in the season.

Grass Valley will play Antelope next Sunday July 2nd and then will tangle with Wasco during the 3rd and 4th at Wasco.

Averill Gives

Fire Warning

State Fire Marshal A. H. Averill again issues a timely warning to all who participate in the "old fashioned Fourth of July celebration" in order that the memory of the 1933 observance will be a happy one and not one marred by the death or suffering of dear ones who are oftentimes the innocent victims of the carelessness and thoughtlessness of others.

The state fire marshal seeks the cooperation of parents particularly in the proper supervision and protection of their children while engaged in the use of fireworks.

The records of his department disclose that the unrestricted use of fireworks is directly responsible for serious personal injury, property damage and even death and it behooves all law abiding citizens to use every precaution to lower this hazard. It is found that communities restricting the use of fireworks by private citizens and providing for a public display of fireworks under the supervision of experts have lowered to a substantial degree the injuries and losses to persons and property, and where there are no restrictions placed on the use of fireworks and firecrackers, an appeal is made to the individual citizen; upon whose shoulders this responsibility is directly placed, to safeguard against serious destruction and thereby make the day a happy one.

Small Brother—Mr. Golden, are you a baseball player?

Mr. Golden—No, Willie, I'm not. I know very little about the game.

Willie—Then why did Sis tell Ma you were such a good catch?

The Fourth of July means a picnic in most family circles and what to serve is of prime importance to the housewife. To most of us, a picnic means filling the picnic basket to the bulging point with fried chicken, potato salad, devil's food cake, ice cream and perhaps watermelon. Of course other things will be included too, but these are the foods most of us look for.

If fried chicken has to be checked from the picnic menu this year, try serving kabob. Kabob is the Persian name for meats skewered on a sharp stick and cooked over an open fire. Allow about a quarter of a pound of meat for each person, cutting it into small pieces, about two inches in diameter. Cook over the coals, turning occasionally so that it will cook evenly. When the meat is done to suit you, apply plenty of butter, salt and pepper.

You can make kabob of all sorts of meat—pork chops, mutton, lamb, liver, and bacon. They can even be made of cheese. These are called cheese in blankets. Cut American cheese into two inch cubes, cover all sides with bacon, fasten securely with toothpicks and place on the stick. Cook over the fire until the bacon is done to suit you. Place between buttered sides of a roll and eat at once. Cheese-in-blankets can also be made at home in the oven and are delicious for luncheon or late supper. Along with the fried chicken, the kabob or cheese in blankets, well buttered sandwiches or rolls are a good accompaniment. Radishes, onions, sliced fresh tomatoes, crisp carrot sticks or shredded cabbage are easily prepared and are the types of vegetables to include in the picnic basket. If members of the family insist on potatoes, potato chips or new potatoes fried in butter along side the kabob will be a welcome addition.

For dessert, ice cream served plain or as a cantaloupe a la mode for example, will be sure to please. Ice cream can now be purchased in containers which keep it frozen for many hours. Fill the thermos jug with a milk shake, a strawberry or a chocolate one, flavored with peppermint and your picnic is bound to be a success.
