

Sleeping Sickness Not Common

Epidemics of lethargic encephalitis or sleeping sickness have occurred in this country, but relatively fewer epidemics have been reported in the United States than in other parts of the world. The recent outbreak in St. Louis has stimulated renewed efforts to discover the manner in which the disease is spread. There is a yearly incidence of this disease throughout the entire United States similar in magnitude to poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis as judged from mortality statistics.

Encephalitis is milder in children and hence frequently overlooked. Recovery takes place promptly, and no one suspects the illness was actually encephalitis. The disease in the United States is apparently sporadic or endemic.

There is usually an acute onset with headache and dizziness. The headache is persistent and usually becomes severe. There may be also pain in the chest, back, groin, and extremities. Elevation of temperature is an early symptom, the fever rising in many to 104 degrees or higher.

With the rise of fever the general symptoms become more severe. Pulse and respiration are not influenced as much by the fever as would usually be expected. Later, signs of mental confusion are likely to appear and may progress to marked drowsiness, with short alternating periods of restlessness. A deep lethargy may develop from which the patient is difficult to arouse. On the contrary, some cases may be highly emotional and require the use of sedatives. There appears to be very little relation between the fever and the mental disturbance. The latter may vary from day to day showing signs of improvement one day and becoming worse the next. The lethargy may last for several days to a week or more, and may progress to coma, particularly in the cases that terminate fatally. Death may occur in less than a week from the onset.

In cases that recover the stupor disappears slowly but mental confusion may persist for some time and many patients are very slow in regaining the use of their voice and in recovering the coordinated use of their extremities. As the mental disturbance makes its appearance the patient may develop an apprehensive attitude moving the head or hands nervously, or persist in staring at persons or objects in the room. The course of the disease is most commonly rapid. Most cases are ill from two to three weeks. Death may occur in 24 hours but usually from five days to two weeks after onset. In recovery the fever comes down in from one to two weeks but other important symptoms often persist for a longer period. Recovery in old persons is very slow.

The precautions advised in the spread of the disease and in general those which are applicable to epidemic poliomyelitis of like intensity including isolation of the patient for three weeks. Connected cases, and cases in the same family occur about as frequently as in poliomyelitis. On

Dairymen May Have Allotment Tax

A decision on the Pacific coast attitude toward production control in the dairy industry was reached at the western conference held at Oakland, Cal., recently, constituting the most important development for the western dairymen under the A. A. A. to date, in the opinion of the dairy specialists at Oregon State college.

With the dairy industry faced with the greatest surplus of stored products in history, the agricultural adjustment administration has determined that emergency measures must be followed by production control. The western dairy representatives at Oakland, including many from Oregon, agreed with this but declared that no such plan will be received by the dairy farmers of the country which does not include the elimination of foreign vegetable oils from use as human food. Restriction of such manufacture of fats and oils produced in the United States was asked.

Elimination of the surplus cows suggested as the most feasible means of reducing production. This can be profitably accomplished by two means the conference decided. One is the immediate compulsory eradication of bovine tuberculosis. The second is the immediate voluntary testing for contageous abortion.

Specialists at Oregon State college point out that Oregon is now practically free from bovine T.B. and well along with contagious abortion, but the latter is an economic rather than a human health problem. The conference further decided that any such elimination of surplus cows, affecting as it would between one and a half to two million cows in this country, would have to be carried out by the government in such a manner as not to depress further the beef market.

The conference set up a permanent western council with one member from each state, and ask that each state set up a committee of its own.

Agriculture School Graduates In Demand

The "market" for agricultural graduates is looking up just as are other employment conditions, judging from requests being received by Dr. W. A. Schoenfeld, dean of agriculture at Oregon State college. Late in October Dean Schoenfeld received requests for nine graduates within a week, with prospects of only being able to fill three of them because practically all of the qualified agricultural graduates of recent years not in business themselves are already placed. Four of the requests came for men trained in dairy manufacture, and four for men trained more generally in the animal industries and economics.

Astoria—The Clatsop county budget for 1934 will call for a tax levy of $325,975, a reduction of $20,206 from the levy for the current year. Despite a heavy tax delinquency and extra expense for relief, the next indebtedness of the county has this year been reduced from $128,000 to $118,000.

Milwaukie—Log rafts belonging to the Hawley Paper and Pulp company, moored in the river since last summer when fire destroyed the cut-up mill, have been taken to Oregon City to be used in the manufacture of pulp. Nothing has been done to remove the debris since the fire. It is believed the mill will not be rebuilt. ing 12 pounds.

St. Helens—A dividend of 15 per cent on commercial deposits of the closed Columbia County bank is announced. The amount to be distributed is $9261. This is the first dividend on commercial accounts. On savings deposits a dividend of 15 per cent has been paid.

Vale—Although it will be only a year before water from the big canal of the Owyhee project reaches his land, Steve Reardon of Malheur county has had a deep well bored and is proceeding to prepare the ground for irrigation. Water was struck at a depth of 375 feet.

Salmon Packers Oppose Tax
Astoria—Columbia river salmon packers are prepared to fight a reported proposal to levy 6 cents a pound processing tax on fresh, mild cured and canned salmon. They declared the tax would ruin the industry. The packers said they re-

Wheat Looks Good In Kansas

While winter wheat made good progress in the soft winter wheat belt dryness restricted growth in the hard winter wheat areas. In Kansas wheat was reported in very good condition in the eastern third of the state, but poorer to only fair in the central and western sections. In the western part much of the wheat has not yet come up. Mixture is generally deficient throughout the southwest and most central western sections of the winter wheat area. In California and the Pacific northwest conditions are most favorable as a result of recent rains which have been beneficial to growing grain and for the germination of seed. Under the wheat reduction program, farmers have signed agreements to take nearly 8,000,000 acres of wheat out of production in 1934. About 3,250,000 acres are in the Hard Winter wheat belt, 2,750,000 acres in the spring wheat states, about 500,000 acres in the Soft Winter wheat area, and close to 1,000,000 acres in the Pacific northwest, Colorado, Idaho and California.

OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

Some foods, like some people, are good mixers. Rice is one. It mixes well with almost anything. It takes on the flavor from other foods, thus making good flavors go farther. It is an economical food for this reason as well as because of its low price.

In common with other cereals, rice is an energy giver. It provides one of the most easily digested forms of starch but like highly milled wheat flour, it is poor in fat and protein. For this reason it is a good thing to cook rice in milk. In that combination there is a good start for a well-rounded diet. As with other cereals and milk you can get along with fewer foods and cheaper ones than if you begin with any other combination.

Rice cooked in milk for breakfast; rice in soups; rice with gravy; rice in hot bread, fritters, omelets, or pancakes; rice and cheese rice puddings—these are but a few of the countless rice dishes that can be provided at a very modest cost to the satisfaction of most families.

BAKED RICE CUSTARD
3 cups milk
2 cups cooked rice
1 cup granulated sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
4 egg whites
6 tsp. sugar

Beat egg yolks and combine with milk and stir until well blended. Then add the rice, sugar, salt and rind. Place molds in a pan of hot water, then put into a moderate oven and bake until firm; whip egg whites, add the 6 tsp. of sugar and put tablespoonful on each mold, and Brown in a slow oven for about 15 minutes. Rice custard may be utilized too as the main dish in the menu. Omit the sugar and the meringue from the above recipe. Bake in individual buttered cups and serve hot with tomato sauce, cheese sauce or creamed chicken or other similar sauces.

Cooperative marketing, exporting of grain from Pacific northwest markets, and any subject relative to the working of the domestic allotment plan will hold the attention of the committee on marketing and finance. Production loans with special emphasis on the organization of local production credit associations will also be discussed.

Holding to present discount rates for smut and dockage and attention to control of smut that yearly makes large inroads into the wheat farmer's income, will be stressed by the wheat handling, warehousing, discounts and production committee.

Open river transportation, freight rates and port districts will be before the transportation committee, which is also expected to evolve recommendations on the truck and bus bill now under fire.

RICE WITH CHEESE & TOMATO
2 tbsp. flour
2 cups tomatoes
1 tsp. salt
1 cup rice
1 cup grated cheese
1 tsp. pepper
1/2 tsp. chopped onion
1/4 tsp. thyme
1/2 bay leaf
1 tsp. parsley

Cook 1 cup rice. Measure out 1 cup grated cheese. To make the tomato sauce melt 2 tbsp. butter, add the flour and stir until smooth. Add the tomatoes, salt, pepper, chopped onion, thyme, bay leaf, and parsley. Cook until it thickens. Put rice in baking dish and pour sauce over it. Add cheese, mix, saving enough to sprinkle over the top. Bake.

Brief Resume of Happenings of the Week Collected for Our Readers

Creswell—G. H. Davidson mends turkeys in unique fashion. One of his flock this summer broke a leg. Davidson put on a splint and put the patient in a yard by itself, but it pined for its companions and did not do well. Realizing it desired company, he fixed up a mirror large enough for the turkey to commune with itself. It immediately became contented, the leg recovered and now it takes its place with the flock.

Klamath Falls, Oct. 30—With two shifts at work, the Kesterson Lumber company mill on Klamath river near here resumed operations Monday after a shutdown since May, 1931. I. E. Kesterson said the NRA code providing for controlled production made possible the resumption of sawing at this plant. It is planned to operate the mill as long as conditions remain as they are or improve, he stated.

Salem—Oregon walnut and filbert growers will receive 5 cents a pound advance from cooperative packing associations, it was announced. First grading of walnuts at the Salem plant was started last Wednesday. It is expected the combined nut crop in Marion county will approximate 300 tons this year. Last year 500 tons were harvested.
