

Crop Conditions All Over World

With harvesting and threshing nearing completion in the Northern Hemisphere and with crop prospects in the Southern Hemisphere becoming more clearly defined, a more accurate appraisal of world wheat supplies is now possible. Latest estimates indicate that a moderate increase over last season is in prospect. Short crops in North America and prospective reductions in the Southern Hemisphere are more than offset by large European crops and increased stocks of old wheat carried over August 1.

The United States crop estimate remains unchanged at 514,816,000 bushels. The Canadian crop is now placed at 271,821,000 bushels against 428,514,000 bushels a year ago. This brings total supplies including carry-over to 483,561,000 bushels as against 560,359,000 bushels a year earlier. The European harvest, out of Russia, is placed at 1,564,943,000 bushels compared with 1,490,732,000 bushels in 1932. This increase is largely the result of the record output in Germany and bountiful harvests in the other large producing countries of Spain, France and Italy, together with a marked gain in the Danube Basin, where last year's harvest was small. No official estimate of the Russian crop is yet available, but trade advices indicate that the crop is the best since 1930, when production was estimated at 989,000,000 bushels. A good harvest is also indicated by the fairly liberal Russian charterings for grain shipments and the cheap offerings on world markets.

Information concerning the output of Southern Hemisphere crops is yet rather incomplete. Harvesting of Australian wheat is under way and the crop is officially forecast at 180,000,000 bushels compared with 216,000,000 bushels a year ago. Trade reports however, indicate that considerable deterioration in some areas has occurred and trade estimates of production are now around 30,000,000 bushels below the official estimate. No estimate of the Argentine crop is yet available but prospects have improved somewhat with beneficial rains during the past month.

RUFUS SCHOOL NOTES

The Rufus girls won their second consecutive volley ball game from a greatly improved team of Wasco girls. The final score was 32 to 25 although Wasco led at the half time 19 to 11. A spirited rally at the beginning of the second half enabled the Rufus girls to forge to the front and from then on were never headed.

Miss Johnson was absent from school Monday due to illness.

The boys will get their first basketball under fire when they tangle with the town team. Speed and endurance we feel will give the boys an even break against brawn and experience. Upon three lettermen, two of them regulars last year, will rest the brunt of the present season.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH
by ADA R. MAYNE
OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

In almost every economical meal planning guide, dried beans and dried peas are served frequently. The reason is that legumes, including peas and beans of all kinds are inexpensive, very filling and have special food values which may be lacking when certain foods are out of reach.

Legumes, unlike most of their vegetable sisters are remarkable for their protein content. Not only are they a rich source of this muscle building food essential, but their protein also resembles that found in the animal sources, eggs and meat. Too, legumes have protective qualities for they supply some calcium and vitamin B.

Scalloped beans with tomatoes, baked beans with ground left over meat, black eyed peas used in salads with shredded cabbages or carrots are some of the many ways of utilizing these versatile vegetables.

The following legume dishes are delicious as well as unusual.

Baked Onions Stuffed With Beans.
Cut large onions in half, simmer in slightly salted water until almost tender. Line the onions out and remove the center rings, chop, and mix with cooked or canned beans, to which melted butter and seasonings have been added. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and fill the onion shells with the mixture. Sprinkle buttered crumbs on top and bake in the oven until onions are tender and brown.

Split Pea Soup.
One pint of dried or split peas
One quart of boiling water
One small bunch of celery
One bunch parsley
One quart of rich milk or thin cream
Two small onions
Salt and pepper to taste.

Wash the peas in cold water, removing those that float. Soak overnight in enough water to cover (1 qt.) Then drain off the soaking water and cook the peas slowly until tender in one quart of boiling water. In the meanwhile, the onion, parsley and celery may either be ground or chopped fine and added to the peas. Cook together until tender. Remove from fire and run soup through a sieve or colander, adding salt and pepper to taste. Bring soup to a boil once again. Just before serving, add the cream or milk which has been scalded.

Ribbon Bean Loaf
One cup navy beans
One cup kidney beans
One cup milk
One teaspoon salt
Two tablespoons butter
One half cup buttered bread crumbs
Cook navy and kidney beans separately until tender and quite dry. Add the salt while cooking. Add one-half cup of cream or milk to each kind of beans. Place beans in alternate layers in a baking dish. Sprinkle crumbs on top and brown slightly in a moderate oven.
