LaFayette—The city council of LaFayette is in need of great municipal revenue and at its last meeting raised the $2 dance license fee to $3.

Salem—A school building program at Salem that will include additions to the Highland and Englewood grade buildings and a wing at Leslie Junior high school will be submitted to the voters at a special election January 15.

Albany—Albany has adopted the policy of deferring legislation on liquor control until the cloud of doubt overhanging the enactment of the Knox state control law, enacted at the recent special session of the legislature, is dispelled.

Medford—Aaron Schollars, 89, of Medford, who drove a team at the battle of Gettysburg and later chased Indians in Utah, is able to be "up and about the house," according to his physician. He has been ill for several months but is now convalescing.

Grants Pass—Reports have come to Grants Pass that silverside and steelhead salmon are going up Deer creek. A state police officer reported that one man had counted 31 salmon in one hour as they jumped the foundation of an old dam near the Redwood highway.

Seaside—Action has been started by members of the Seaside Chamber of Commerce to secure aid from the CWA for constructing an airport at Seaside. J. E. Oates has volunteered to turn over a strip of land in the Stanley Acres district to the city for that purpose.

Grants Pass—With the announcement that passing of the new Knox law gave broader powers to officials for liquor law enforcement, Sherman S. Smith, county attorney of Josephine county, declares that he intends to "clamp down" harder than ever on all liquor violations.

Central Point—Thomas Quilt, representing Edward Seufert, has completed the purchase of the plant of the Rogue River Cheese & Products, Inc., at Central Point from the trustee, and will commence work this week to put the plant in shape for operation early in January.

Salem—Applications covering federal loans for more than $1,500,000 to finance construction of 10 state building projects will be ready to submit to the public works administration within a few days, according to William Elmsig, secretary to the board of control.

Medford—Up to December 1 in the justice courts of Jackson county, 31 auto licenses had been revoked, cancelled or suspended, according to data furnished the county clerk's office by the secretary of state's office. These penalties were for drunken and reckless driving. A number were for out-of-county residents.

Salem—Forty-five gallons of alleged Christmas whiskey of the moonshine variety went off the market when "revenuers," confiscating their first still in Marion county since repeal of national prohibition, arrested Leo E. Gier. The still, officers said, was equipped with all accessories, and had a capacity of 150 gallons.

Eugene—Discovery of the fact that the state tax commission, in computing Lane county's share of the state tax, figured on a basis of the total valuation before reduction was made in valuation of timber lands owned by 13 large lumber and timber companies has held up the final decision as to the exact county levy for 1934.

Bend—Bend's two big lumber mills, now under the NRA code governing pine plants of Western America, plan no drastic curtailment of operations over Christmas holidays. This is taken to indicate, barring extreme weather, continuance of present operations through the entire winter, with no general shutdowns contemplated.

Pear Price Doubles in Year
Medford—Fruit shipments from the Rogue River valley to date total 1656 cars of pears and 93 cars of apples. The pear price in this valley is quoted now as twice as high as last year.

Mill May Resume Work
Salem—The Charles K. Spaulding Logging company's plant probably will resume operations early next spring, officials of the concern indicated here. The plant is one of Salem's largest industries and at one time employed approximately 600 men.

Big Potatoes Exhibited
Toledo—When a farmer boasts of 30 "spuds" from his regular crop weighing 65 pounds, it sounds like a fish story, but A. C. Crawford, Siletz valley farmer, is displaying a box of the tubers of that number and size at the First National bank here. The potatoes were grown on ordinary Siletz river bottom land along with Mr. Crawford's crop of several hundred sacks. The large potatoes are smooth in texture.

WHEAT

grain trade by the Government, by maintenance and tightening of the Italian and French regulations which prohibits imports. Among outstanding developments in exporting areas were the Emergency Export Corporation in the United States, designed to facilitate exports from the Pacific Coast, a similar arrangement in the Argentine, providing for the purchase of grain at fixed prices by the newly created Grain Board, and the sale of this grain to exporters for export at world prices, and the Australia proposal for the initiation of a license system providing for the prohibition of exports except under permit, with allotted quotas to bring exports with the quantity set by International agreement. Free purchases of wheat in domestic Australian markets are to be maintained, although the government will buy and sell excessive supplies if Australian growers are not offered world parity prices. The conclusion of the London Wheat Agreement during the year was notable as the first achievement in international cooperation, designed to improve the condition of world market through balancing supplies with effective demand.
World stocks of wheat at the close of the year, were probably a little larger than a year earlier with increases in farm holdings, particularly in the large producing sections of Europe, offsetting smaller visible stocks in ex-European surplus areas and smaller stocks on ocean passage. Large supplies in important consuming areas, however, where they may more readily be absorbed into local consumption, suggests more rapid disappearance of accumulated stocks during the remainder of the crop year. United States supplies according to latest revised estimates, were about 212,000,000 bushels smaller this season than last, as a result of the short crop with indications of a moderate reduction in the carryover at the close of the crop year.
