The Importance of Cheese

To use more cheese is one way to use more milk. Cheese contains the same elements as milk only in different proportions and can be used in ways that milk cannot.

Cheese is not just something to season or flavor some other food or condiment, or accessory. Whole milk cheese is a substantial food in itself, good in a main dish on a meatless day, for example, because it contains many of the same food values as meat as well as other values. It is rich in protein, fat, calcium and phosphorus and in vitamin A—just as milk is rich in these same elements.

The high food value of cheese, as well as its flavor, makes it a valuable addition to an oven dish, to a cream sauce and to various soups. An onion soup, for instance, made with meat stock, and served with toasted bread on top and grated hard cheese over the toast, makes a delicious and likewise a very nutritious lunch, indeed a very substantial part of any meal.

Because cheese contains so much protein, it should be cooked at very low temperature. In fact, most dishes should be cooked over water or in a very slow oven.

Some "Different" Cheese Dishes Are

Tomato Rabbit

Two tablespoons butter
One-half small onion
Two tablespoons flour
One-half pound grated cheese, shaved thin

Salt and pepper
One pint canned tomatoes
Cook the onion in the butter for a few minutes and stir in the flour. Gradually add the tomatoes and cook until the mixture thickens. Add the cheese, stir until it melts, and keep the heat very low. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and serve at once on crisp toast or crackers.

A quick way to make this rabbit is to use canned tomato soup, instead of canned tomatoes which must be thickened. In this case brown the onion in a little butter, add the tomato soup and when hot add the cheese. Stir until the cheese is melted and the mixture smooth. Use a ten ounce can of soup to three-fourth pound of cheese, or more cheese if desired. This dish is often called "ringtum diddy."

Scalloped Cabbage, Spaghetti, and Cheese

One and one-half cups of spaghetti broken in small pieces
Three tablespoons flour
Three tablespoons butter
Two cups milk
One teaspoon salt
One-half pound of American cheese
One quart shredded cabbage
One cup buttered bread crumbs

Cook the spaghetti in boiling salted water for 20 minutes, and drain. Make a hot sauce of the flour, butter, milk and salt. Shave up the cabbage, add to the hot sauce, and stir until melted. Put the cabbage, spaghetti and sauce in a buttered baking dish in layers and cover the top with the buttered crumbs. Bake 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Auto Dealers Report Better Times

Proof that the automobile industry is snapping out of the depression with gusto was offered northwest Ford Dealers last night at their regular monthly sales meeting by H. H. Wilcox, Seattle branch manager of the Ford Motor Co. He informed the dealers that 1933 Ford sales records had far outdone those of 1932.

Seattle branch Ford Dealers, including Portland, and the state of Oregon, sold over 34 per cent more cars and truck units in 1933 than in the previous year.

"These figures," declared Wilcox, "are indicative of how Ford sales have increased throughout the country, and I attribute this increase to the public's new optimistic attitude coupled with the government's program of re-employment which is putting so many thousands of men back to work."

Wilcox, besides being enthusiastic about the national outlook for the coming year, is also cheered over prospects for the new Ford V-8 in 1934. "I anticipate a 75 per cent increase in sales this year over last" he stated, "and so far January figures bear out my contention; we have sold more units in the first ten days of this month than were sold in the entire month of January, 1933."

I've kept track of the money it saved us this month

"HERE it is—all put down. Whenever my telephone relieved me of a trip downtown, I made note of the nickel, dime or quarter saved. They soon amounted to more than the price of telephone service, and I also have the telephone for calling friends, and making appointments. It's true, and I've proved it—the telephone in the home costs so little and does so much that it simply doesn't pay to be without one."
