Gill Re-elected Master

Ray W. Gill was re-elected as master of the Oregon State Grange on the concluding day of the annual session Wednesday.

With flags and pinions placed across all the principal streets, flags displayed in front of every business house and welcoming signs in all windows, Roseburg, capital of the Umpqua Valley, is entertaining the 61st session of the Oregon state grange in royal style.

Over 1500 members of the order in this little city, hundreds being in camp in a beautiful grove on the banks of the river, and hotels, auto camps and rooming houses, together with many private homes, are filled with the delegates and members, representing every county in Oregon.

A get-together was held Monday evening, under the auspices of recreational leaders, Misses Claribel Nye and Gertrude Skow, and the same afternoon the annual horse shoe pitching tournament was held. A beautiful cup, engraved with the names of all granges that have won the contest one or more times, is the prize to the grange winning three bouts.

Lecturers' conferences and sessions of the home economics department are held in the morning before the regular sessions convene, and hundreds attend these meetings to obtain information in conducting their departments in their home granges.

One of the notable features of the meeting is the chorus of more than a hundred voices trained by E. O. Goodspeed of Portland, and Tuesday afternoon E. M. Ehrhardt, President of this Federal Land Bank at Spokane, spoke on "Farm Credits." Wednesday evening Mr. B. F. Irvine, editor of the Oregon Journal, addresses the assembled grangers. Professor George Peavy, President of the Oregon State college, was the principal speaker at the program represented by the state lecturer Tuesday evening to a capacity audience.

Interest centers around the election of officers for the State Grange, who are elected every two years. The election committee will report Thursday afternoon, the officers having already been chosen through a referendum in the 338 granges of the state. Selection of the next meeting place will be decided Wednesday by ballot of the delegates, and already localities are competing for the honor.

Thursday afternoon presentation of Golden Sheaf Certificates to members with 50 years of continuous membership will take place, followed by the beautiful memorial services for departed members of the state grange. At 3 p. m. the same day the drill contests, with teams from all counties in the district, Lane, Douglas, Josephine, Jackson, Coos and Curry; represented, takes place. During the evening the Fifth degree will be exemplified by the Douglas county Pomona grange, and immediately following the officers of the State Grange will confer the Sixth degree upon a large class.

Among those attending the convention from Sherman county are Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Adams and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Guyton.
