According to weight Jack Cochran's prize hen only has to lay seven eggs to make a dozen. A sample of this hen's work was brought to this office this week and weighed and a half ounces and measured 7 and five eighths inches the long way and 6 and a quarter the small way. For a moderate sized hen this rates as a good days work and one that is probably the result of the patriotic fervor that has possessed all living beings hereabouts for the past week.

We wish to thank the Moro Fire Department and all who helped to put out the fire that so nearly destroyed our home Monday.

Eugene To Celebrate With Pageant

Eugene, Ore., July 5—With a new name, "The Oregon Trail" replacing the former designation of "Sunset Trail" and more elaborate, more impressive features for every event, Eugene's triennial epic of the west will be staged July 26, 27, 28.

Not only Eugene, but all the surrounding territory has fallen completely into the spirit of the event, which in 1929 attracted national attention. For several weeks

Growsome Laboratory Experiment

Weird laboratory experiments to discover a modern "elixir of life," by stirring puppets' heartbeats halted by death, were pronounced a scientific success by University of California savants recently—even though the dogs died. Doctor Cornish announced that the experiments will be continued and a strenuous effort made to add "consciousness" to the restored heart action. This, he said, might cause life to be prolonged for a considerable period, perhaps indefinitely.

men have cultivated beards, and all women of the city are going about in the hoop skirts and bustles of the 1850's.

The epic will again have three main features—the pageant, which this year will have a huge cast of 2,000; the pioneer parade, which will bring together replicas of early day scenes, and thousands of pioneer relics, and the Progress parade, which will draw entries from communities and industrial and business organizations from every part of the state.

The pageant, which will depict the development of the Oregon territory from pre-historic times to present and predictions for the future, will be enacted on Hayward field on a huge stage that will cover the football field. Many thrilling episodes have been added for this year, and the attraction will undoubtedly be the most inspiring depiction of this type ever presented in the United States.

All the principal officials and directors who made the 1929 event such a success are back this year, and with the event still nearly a month away, plans and preparations are practically complete.

Hugh E. Rosson, graduate manager of the University of Oregon is again manager; Mrs. Doris Smith, nationally known dramatic director is directing the pageant for the third time; Cal Young, noted pioneer authority, is again in charge of the pioneer parade and Jack Maglady, one of the best known business leaders of the state, heads the progress parade.

resulting in the greatest single impetus to farm record keeping ever experienced here, says G. W. Kuhlman, emergency extension economist who has been assisting in the distribution and cooperating with county agents in advising farmers as to their use.

"Every farmer who is in a production control association has a contractual relationship with Uncle Sam much the same as he would have with a landlord from whom he is renting on the shares," explains Mr. Kuhlman. "Every such renter would have to keep some records, and in the same way the government expects every contract signer to keep simple accounts and is helping by supplying a book, for the purpose free."

Observations of field men who have made cost of production studies show that not more than a fourth to a third of Oregon farmers have kept any form of written accounts in the past. Most of them keep only records of receipts and expenses rather than making summaries of their various enterprises and for the entire farm at the beginning and end of the year.

"The AAA has called attention to the need of some record which will aid individually and collectively in getting more reliable data for future use and which will help the farmer in eliminating weak spots in his business and encouraging the strong ones," Kuhlman continued.

"In the country as a whole the AAA has provided 2 1/2 million farmers with these record books and has arranged with the extension services for any necessary aid in starting the work. It has frankly stated, however, that the contracting farmer need not use that particular book if he prefers any other one, possibly one more complete.

"Many Oregon farmers who have always kept regular account books are continuing with them and plan to transfer the necessary information to the AAA books for whatever inspection may be made. Some others just starting are choosing to begin with the more complete extension service book which provides convenient space for labor records, summaries by enterprises, blanks for keeping possible income tax data adapted to Oregon's laws and other material not provided for in the more abridged AAA account book," Kuhlman concluded.

County agents have copies of both kinds of books available in their local offices.
