

CORN-HOG PROGRAM FOR NEXT YEAR ASSURED

Definite announcement that the agricultural adjustment administration will offer a new corn-hog production control program for 1935 has been received by the extension service at Oregon State college. Details of the new plan will be announced about November 1, the officials were informed.

Decision of the AAA leaders to repeat the corn-hog program in some form following compilation of preliminary results of the national referendum among present corn-hog contract signers showing a favorable vote in the ratio of more than two to one for carrying on a follow-up program. In Oregon the vote was favorable in the proportion of about nine to seven.

The vote was much closer on the second question in which the contract signers were asked to express their opinion on a proposed one-contract-per-farm plan starting in 1936 which would include all grains and livestock. The early reports showed a favorable vote nationally of only six to five, while Oregon farmers gave it an adverse vote of more than ten to six.

No announcement has been made from Washington as to any decision on this one-contract plan. Oregon extension officials find that western growers are skeptical of this idea and feel that it would be detrimental in this territory. In Oregon the wheat counties particularly voted almost solidly against the idea.

The referendum results seem to indicate rather clearly that corn-hog producers want a follow-up program," Dr. A. G. Black, chief of the corn-hog section announced.

"In view of this indication, it has been decided to offer a definite plan as soon as the necessary provisions can be worked out. Such a plan probably will follow the general outline of the 1934 contract, involving control requirements and benefit payments with respect to both corn and hogs."

A new program has also been recommended by a group of corn-hog committeemen and extension workers from 18 states called to Washington. N. E. Dodd of Baker county, farmer member of the state board of review, represented Oregon. Representatives of the three major farm organizations are also said to have recommended continuance of the program.

PERMANENT LAND USE POLICY ADVOCATED

Rural tax, debt and relief conditions in Oregon and other states have emphasized the need of a permanent land use policy which will help put farming on a more stable and profitable basis and reduce unnecessary public expense, says A. S. Burrier, farm management specialist at Oregon State college now serving as land planning consultant for this state.

The need for a permanent land use policy for Oregon has been brought to the attention of federal state and county officials by the prevalence of long-time tax and farm mortgage delinquency in many areas, a mounting demand for extension of public relief to rural families, and the threatened disruption of public services such as schools and roads in many communities due to an inadequate tax base," says Burrier.

The present land use problems in Oregon and other states are now being investigated by the National Resources board of the federal government, with the idea of having the information collected serve as a guide for a new land policy.

"The free-for-all methods that have prevailed in the past are responsible for the settlement of some lands unsuited to agriculture or for location of settlers in isolated areas," Burrier explained. "The costs of government and social facilities for families in such areas are usually in excess of their ability to pay."

"When good lands in established communities are still available, it would seem unwise and un economical to permit development of these unprofitable areas. Leaders of the proposed land policy movement believe that farming areas too poor to support families under normal conditions should be separated from better lands so that these sub-marginal lands may be put to more satisfactory use."

Supplementing the federal study are several Oregon investigations that are designed to provide more detailed data on land use within the state. The Oregon State College experiment station, through the use of FERA funds, is now carrying on studies of tax delinquency, land ownership, and part time farming, all of which are closely related to problems of land use in this state.

Drouth Cattle Purchase In Excess

Additional purchases of drouth cattle, in excess of the original quotas which expired in September have been authorized in Washington as a tapering off process. Oregon has been allotted $63,374 in this clean up buying which will purchase about 4500 head additional. State directors in charge of the cattle buying have been authorized to purchase cattle only from producers clearly unable to provide adequate feed supplies for their stock.

Contracted Acreage Used For Summerfallow

Oregon wheat farmers used nearly half of their contracted acres as additional fallow land, according to a survey made of 26 states including Oregon. The figures gathered by the AAA show for Oregon 46.6 per cent of the land left out of wheat used for fallow; 23.3 per cent was in new seedings for pasture or hay, slightly more than 20 per cent lay completely idle, and 8.3 per cent was used for food and feed production for home use. Less than 2 per cent was devoted to weed control and other miscellaneous uses.
