Mrs. N. W. Thompson spent last week end visiting at the home of her father, Jack Tompson, in Portland and at Hillboro at the home of her daughter Mrs. Busch.

Weather for the past two weeks has been just the right sort—for ground hogs. Except for rare bits of sunsine fog has held forth in the air all the time. It has not been cold, in fact seldom freezing, but it has been foggy. The county road grader is working on the Wasco west road and on down the Fulton canyon road. The city streets look like boulevards since the smoothing job done on them last week by Harvey Thompson and L. L. Peetz.

MORO SCHOOL NOTES
By Anita Kenny
There will be no basketball games this week-end as the Moro teams will not play until Monday. On that night they will play Rufus. Doris Morrison returned to school Wednesday after an absence of two weeks. Last Friday the "Optimist" was passed out to those students who possess student body tickets. A majority of the boys of the high school and junior high attended tractor school Tuesday afternoon.

Among those absent from school this week due to illness were: Melba Thergerson, Alton Axtell, Barbara Belshie, and Betty Powell. Freda Rice was in The Dalles on Monday.

Vivian Reynolds from Grass Valley was a visitor at school last Thursday and Friday.

Bill Roth of Grass Valley was also a visitor at school on Thursday of last week. Having defeated the Grass Valley Tigerettes on the home floor last Wednesday night, the Moro girls are still in the lead for the county basketball championship. The boys, however, suffered another defeat. The Junior High boys team played on that night also and were defeated by only one point; the final score being 16 to 15.

Monday night the Junior High girls will play the Rufus girls. This will be their first game with a team from another town.

Representative Haight Rises To Remarks On Legislative Topics

State House, Salem—One thing that I like about the legislature is the squirrels on the Capitol grounds; big, silver greys, always sociable, hungry and playful. They will climb up your leg, and go into your pocket after a peanut, friendly-like and always looking for something, like a politician.

What the legislature should do is one thing, and what the people should do is quit another. The legislature should pass the laws and the people write to their legislators and tell them to pass some laws and then "holler" about too many laws. Write to your senator today, but leave your representative alone.

In one breath the legislature is accused of doing "nothing", and in doing "too much." We have been trying to define just where "nothing" ends and where "too much" begins and have reached the conclusion that "too much" ends with "nothing."

This government is like Humpty Dumpty, and all of the King's horses and all of the King's men can't put him together again. In 1929 Mr. Humpty Dumpty fell off the wall and we are trying to put him together again with codes and so these codes remind us of a jig-saw puzzle, with each little scrap a code, and when we match them all up, we get a ten cent picture, and then somebody kicks the table and the jig-saw puzzle looks like a scrambled egg or Humpty Dumpty.

Instead of passing a law, like they used to do, they pass a code, and that code contains everything that a plumber, lawyer or beauty doctor ever thought of. This is extended to every craft, trade, business and profession—a code. The NRA, with about five hundred codes, will be added to all of the state codes. They will be passed, and then, everybody will forget them and that is where "too much" law ends with "nothing." They are just about as effective as if some farmer back home tore 15 pages from Montgomery Ward's catalogue and voted for them.

But we must realize that the newest thing in government is codes. We have to put Humpty Dumpty back together again and the easiest way to unscramble the egg is with codes. Instead of passing one law, we can pass one thousand laws with one code and with 500 codes get 500,000 laws and so, the legislature that used to retail a few laws has gone into the wholesale business—codes.

Each code creates a government within itself: a little monarchy, and so we have a republic with all of its arms, legs, fingers and toes—little monarchies, and if they ever fall off the wall, like Humpty Dumpty, it will take a dictator to pick up the pieces.

But, if I were governor—"I, governor of Oregon." It was Upton Sinclair, who predicated a political campaign on "I, Governor." Well, if I were governor, I would take my vacation on no pay, when the legislature was in session. Poor governor, poor man—and, if you have tears to shed, shed now, rather than to bring a bouquet when all is done.

"I, Governor Martin," must have as many ideas in his head, as the average person has flu bugs—thousands. Everybody talking to him, writing to him, phoning, wiring, and "I, representative," dropped into the executive chamber to weep upon his shoulder—poor man.

You are lucky if you have a job, or an acre and a cow, and are not governor.

But governors come and governors go, and when they come there

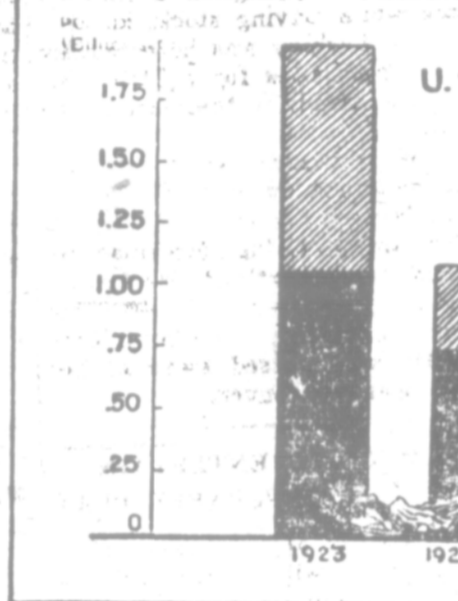

POTATOES JOIN AAA

Addition of potatoes to the list of basic commodities under the AAA is recommended by a committee representing 16 eastern and middlewestern states. The plan proposed would not include processing taxes and benefit payments but would seek to limit production to approximate demand by allotting saleable tonnage among the potato growing states and then to individuals, and enforcing it by laying a tax of 50 cents per hundredweight on potatoes sold above the allotment. The production base proposed is the three highest years in the five-year period 1930-1934.

U. S. EXPORTS OF PORK AND LARD

WITH exports of pork and lard from the United States still remaining at a low level, a large increase in hog production is not warranted at this time, according to officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Exports of pork from the United States showed a slightly upward trend in 1934, but this was offset by a decline in exports in lard. Annual shipments abroad remain at about three-fourths of a billion pounds, as compared with nearly two billion pounds in the early post-war period. The decline during the ten years from 1923 to 1932, as indicated by the above graph, has been equivalent to about nine million hogs. Great Britain, the principal mar-

TOUGH JOBS

Prove "CATERPILLAR" DIESELS save as much as 70 percent on Fuel Costs

Results in the field mean a lot to the grain farmer who wants smooth economical power. That is why "Caterpillar" Diesels have had such a tremendous sales record during the past few years—they have proven their fuel and operating economy on the toughest jobs.

Savings of 70 percent and 80 percent on fuel are reported everywhere. Here's a typical case from Peters and Ginn, Moro, Oregon. After working 3155 acres, they report "The total amount of fuel used per acre in plowing was 1.039 gallons as compared with our former record of 2.5 gallons per acre with our gas engine. This represents a 25c per acre fuel saving with our Diesel 50."

Go Diesel with "Caterpillar"

Such savings on fuel alone will pay for a "Caterpillar" in a short time. But the "Caterpillar" Diesel has other advantages nearly as important. More power, less upkeep, fewer breakdowns, standardized service and smoother, more efficient operation are all features of these well-built track type Diesels.

Ask to have these features explained to you at our office in The Dalles — or send for free illustrated literature on "Caterpillar" 35, 40, 50 and 75 models.
