MORO SCHOOL NOTES

By Anita Kenny
The cast which Miss Biggness selected for the Glee Club operetta, "Quest of the Gypsy" is: Gypsy boy—Genevieve Nahouse; Myra—Mary Pinkerton; Country boy—Betty Powell; Barbara (fortune teller)—Dorris Thompson; Isabel—Vivian Fuller; Rhoda—Melba Thogerson; Dorothy—Irma Mae Morgan; Ida—Gertrude Gillmor; Jean—Winifred Belshee; and Lillian—Marie McLeod.

The public speaking classes have taken up the study of parliamentary practice and intend to spend some time upon it. Today there are so many club organizations that everyone needs a knowledge of the rules and regulations of correct procedure so that the business of an organization can be carried on in an orderly manner. Each student is to take part in every meeting, thereby gaining full value of the practice.

The 4-H club members will be entertained at a banquet at Hotel Moro Saturday night. This banquet is an annual affair and is sponsored by the Commercial Club.

The Moro girls team defeated the Warriorettes by 17 points last Friday night on the Wasco floor, the final score being 29 to 12. The score of the boys game was 26 to 27, the Moro team losing by only one point.

This Friday night the Moro teams will play at Rufus. Monday night Wasco will play here.

The band is busy practicing for the band concert which is to be held March 6. In addition, students not in the band are rehearsing for skits that are to be presented the same evening.

Helen Morrison returned to school Wednesday after an absence of two weeks during which time she was confined to her home.

Several of the students from Moro attended the play entitled "Hot Copy" which was given Saturday night by the Grass Valley teachers.

HI-WAY TO HEALTH
by ADA R. MAYNE
OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

The best diet for the normal human being includes a certain variety of the common foods. Poor diets are not poor because of what they include but of what they lack. They are poor because they are not complete; that is, not balanced.

Keep these points in mind and you will not be worried by the fallacy which tells you not to eat fish and milk together, or milk and tomatoes or acid fruits. You will serve fish baked in milk if you like it, and you will drink milk at breakfast or lunch or dinner along with your orange or grapefruit. You may even add lemon juice to the baby's milk, or combine his orange juice and milk.

The fish and milk fallacy is old and persistent. Perhaps it started with somebody who blamed this combination of foods for an illness that was really caused by a bit of spoiled fish or crab meat, which would have made him sick anyhow, with or without milk.

Yet there are people who will eat fish chowder, which is made with milk, who are afraid to drink milk at a meal where they have, say, fried fish. They may not worry about crab or lobster or shrimp when served a la Newburg, but they shudder if ice cream is served after any sea food. There just isn't anything to the notion, provided of course, the foods themselves are all fresh and in good condition. Fish, crabs, shrimp, lobsters, oysters and clams are protein foods, like meat and eggs and cheese, and far from being "poisonous" when used with milk, they are good with cream sauce or with milk gravy, or baked or creamed or scalloped in milk, as the case may be, or served with milk to drink at the same meal.

Then there is always someone worried about sour fruits and milk together. "Don't they curdle in the stomach?" "And if they do," the nutritionist calmly interjects, "what of it?" The first process of the digestion of milk is curdling. The gastric juice, in the stomach, does that. The curd that results from a mixture of fruit acids and milk is much finer and therefore easier to digest than the milk curd ordinarily formed in the stomach. There is no reason to be afraid of curdled milk, but quite the contrary. Buttermilk, you know, and a lot of kinds of curdled milk, are often recommended for the delicate digestion. And some authorities on child feeding recommend adding lemon juice to milk to help the baby to digest it.

Do not let anyone persuade you that any one food will save your undernourished or ailing child. Build the child's diet on a milk foundation. Add the food materials milk does not provide, or in which it needs to be reinforced. Give him, for one thing, a cereal, but give him also orange juice or tomato juice, with vegetables and meats prepared in ways that suit his needs, for he, like you, should have variety.

In other words, each class of food has its part to play. And each does its best work only when the others are present. This does not mean they must all be present at the same meal, though they usually are in a well planned lunch or dinner, and maybe breakfast as well. But it is not a good idea to allow more than a day to elapse without checking up on the balance of your family diet to see whether you have all the classes of food you need.

Jobs Available

Corvallis—The specter of a jobless commencement at the conclusion of their college career does not confront most of the seniors of the technical schools at Oregon State college this year, a check-up on the employment situation shows. In the leading men's technical schools of forestry, agriculture, engineering and pharmacy the deans report conditions greatly improved with actual shortages of prospective graduates for waiting positions. All through the depression there has been considerable demand for technical graduates, but conditions now are distinctly improved over a year or so ago, reports show.

"We could place three times the forestry graduates this spring," said President G. W. Peavy, who retains his position as dean of the forestry school. "Our hardest job is to keep them till they are graduated, as many are tempted by jobs available even before they finish."

Agricultural training covers such a broad field that conditions are mixed, but there is a distinct shortage of prospective graduates this year in many branches, says Dean W. A. Schoenfeld.

"A big demand now is for men trained in soils, agricultural engineering, farm management, and some phases of plant and animal industries fitting them for work in the new grazing service, soil erosion work and rural electrification," explained Dean Schoenfeld. "More requests are coming for graduates in the other fields of agriculture as well, but there is a real shortage of available men with special training."

Pharmacy graduates worthy of recommendation by the school have all been absorbed in the past by the industry and will doubtless continue to be, is the terse summing up of the situation given by Dean A. Ziefle.

Better times in the "heavy industries" will cause a big pick up in engineering employment, and marked improvement in the outlook is already apparent, reports Acting Dean R. H. Dearborn, in charge of the largest school in the college. The Bonneville dam, bridge building and similar projects have taken scores of OSC engineers, and the outlet to private industries is improving steadily, he says.
