STATE MATTERS

(Continued from page one) division of the public utilities commission. Edward A. Landis of Portland succeeds Herbert Hauser as superintendent of transportation and Alvan Kurtz of Salem has been named as special attorney for the department in place of Arch McDonald who resigned. Hauser has been retained in the department in charge of the newly created field supervision and enforcement section. J. O. Russell of Eugene who has been designated as chief engineer in the utilities department, succeeding Claude Lester, is also a democrat.

Henry F. Cabell, new member of the state highway commission, is the youngest man ever to be honored by appointment to that commission. He will not be 40 until next November. He is a native of Oregon, the grandson of Henry Failing, prominent Oregon pioneer and is said to be the richest man in the state. Although a Republican he was active in support of General Martin in the recent campaign. Cabell saw service in the world war and during the latter part of that conflict was an aide-de-camp to Martin.

The county court of Lane county although all Democrats selected a Republican to succeed Howard S. Merriam, a Republican, as state representative from that district. It will be interesting to note whether or not this precedent is followed by other county courts in filling legislative vacancies.

Max Gehlar, director of the state department of agriculture since its creation in 1931, has retired to private life and will devote his entire time to his farm and cannery both located in Polk county. In turning his department over to the new director, Solon T. White of McMinnville, Gehlar also left a record for economy and efficiency which is going to be hard to equal, let alone excel. The secret of Gehlar's success is to be found largely in his capacity for work. As head of the department of agriculture he also filled three subordinate positions in the department resulting in savings in salaries aggregating more than $36,000 in the four year period.

Engineers of the public utilities department estimate that the state can save $9,762 a year on its telephone bill by installing a semi-mechanical private branch exchange of its own at a cost of $21,000. Present telephone service of state departments housed in the capitol group of buildings costs $12,564 a year. The engineers figure that this could be handled at a total cost of $6,366 a year including depreciation and interest on the state's investment in its own equipment. The balance of the estimated saving would come through commissions on toll business originating thru the state switchboard. The survey of the telephone situation was made at the instigation of State Treasurer Holman who has been agitating for a centralized installation ever since he has been in office.

Refinancing of the Medford, Hood River and Ochoco irrigation districts was completed this week when State Treasurer Holman received $557,101.52 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation with which to take up the old bonds. The indebtedness of the Medford district is being refinanced on the basis of 40 cents on the dollar, the Hood River district on the basis of 63.616 cents on the dollar and the Ochoco district on the basis of 20.26 cents on the dollar. The refinancing negotiations were carried out through the state Reclamation commission of which State Engineer Stricklin is secretary. It is expected that refinancing of several other districts will be made possible in the near future.

Reorganization of the Milk Control Board is anticipated as a move of the near future. Dairy interests are understood to be very much dissatisfied with the present board.
