INTER-COMMUNITY CLEAN-UP

A suggestion has been made that there be some sort of competition between the towns of this county in the matter of clean-up days. It is the thought that at some specified date, a judge or judges tour the towns and rate them for cleanliness, beauty and fire prevention conditions and that in a week or ten days the same judges again view the towns and rate them on the success each had made in cleaning and beautifying.

Whether such cooperation is possible or not, we cannot say, but for Americans, ordinarily, the idea of some sort of competition usually stirs up more than ordinary interest. There is no doubt that much could be done to improve the appearance of small towns all over the country.

This condition might well be ameliorated by some rules of conduct that depended on civic pride for success. Insurance rates in small towns are based largely on the cleanliness of the towns and the fire fighting equipment.

thing like marriage. Now Old Man Oregon has gone and wedded himself a mate and the great and sovereign voters have intoned their incantations over the pair and given their approval. Maybe wisely and maybe not, only time will tell, but—it is no more proper to end the governor's reign at the end of the first six months than to end the marriage after the first quarrel.

We have no faith in the bridegroom who bangs the first burned and soggy biscuit down on the wedding table cloth and proclaims his departure for home where things are never burned and the pastry is never soggy. With a bit of patience that self same bride may in time become the best of cooks. And children may one day proclaim her biscuits as the very acme of perfection.

So may it be with the general. He says what he thinks and to all appearances thinks what he says. He expresses himself boldly and oftentimes brazenly and sometimes hastily, but he means it. He wots not of diplomacy. Of course, he is wrong part of the time, but who are we to demand perfection in our officers?

It causes one to doubt the conviction of the congress for the bonus bill when they choose the very worst bill before them.

It begins to look as if the rain maker had taken a flight to Hawaii and had failed to return.

More babies have been born this year already in Sherman county than were born in 1934. No contracted acreage rules are in force it appears.

One expects these days that every deserving Democrat will have a job, but the prospects that some should have two jobs is overdoing it a bit.

A Multnomah county senator has suggested that the new state house be erected with funds derived from a tax on gasoline. We suggest that, in case this is done, the new structure be called the gas house.

STATEHOUSE GOSSIP

Democrats will still retain control of the house, even if republicans are chosen, if there are no other vacancies. If all were republicans chosen by county courts to fill the seats the democrats would have a 34 to 28 majority. The senate will remain in control of the republicans.

The problem before the special session after a location can be found for holding an assembly, will be important. Not only does it have to provide means of building the capitol, it must determine what type where it will be constructed in Salem and many other matters.

The governor appears to be enjoying the voluntary capitol fund started with a dollar bill sent by a Denver, Colo. resident. The fund was growing slowly, Governor Martin says he wishes the fund to mount high to demonstrate that Oregonians can give and get their minds off the view of "gimme". The money will be used for some special phase of the new building. We suggest a fine press room.

The report of the committee

NO DIVORCE

We learn from the Salem column that there is possibility that there will be an attempt to recall the doughty governor ere the summer is past. They would hang his hide on the fence because he has displeased the powers that would be.

named by the governor to investigate the administration of federal and state relief funds, has completed its report and submitted it to the Governor. It was announced that it may be released sometime this week, but up to date nothing has been officially announced relative to it.

The Governor is anxious for the press of the state to use the entire report, understood to be 30 page long, rather than summarize it. Therefore it was expected printed copies of the report will be obtained before the announcement is made public. It was understood no serious irregularities will be listed, and that generally the administration of the funds will be given a clean slate.

The state supreme court this week held its term in Pendleton. Chief Justice J. U. Campbell was still in the east and was not expected back before June 1. The Supreme court building now houses the board of control, Governor's office and state treasurer.
