

Fast Driving Expensive Habit

It pays to drive an automobile at moderate speeds.

Detailed evidence of the increased consumption of gasoline that accompanies high speed driving is presented in a statement by the Oregon State Motor association citing the results of government tests.

Following the receipt of information that actual tests on the highway have shown that a motorist traveling at 40 miles an hour gets four more miles per gallon of gasoline than he would if driving at 60 miles an hour, the motorists organization obtained details of the tests from the United States bureau of standards at Washington D. C.

Bureau Makes Tests

Tests conducted by the Bureau with different types and makes of cars have developed a formula which would seem to clearly indicate the relationship between and gasoline consumption. It was pointed out.

The following tabulation represents the results of tests with a car that will average 18 miles to the gallon when operated at a speed of 30 miles an hour: 10 miles per hour—18.7 miles to the gallon. 20 miles per hour—18.9 miles per gallon; 30 miles per hour—18.0 miles per gallon; 40 miles per hour—16.4 miles per gallon; 50 miles per hour—14.6 miles per gallon; 60 miles per hour—12.6 miles per gallon; 70 miles per hour—10.6 miles per gallon; 80 miles per hour—8.6 miles per gallon.

It is pointed out that the speed with the highest economy was found to be around 20 miles per hour, falling off sharply as speeds in excess of 50 miles per hour are reached. It is also noted that at very low speeds fuel efficiency also begins to diminish.

More Oil Used Also

The effect of speed on oil consumption has been found to be even greater than it is on gasoline consumption, but because of the wide variance in the performance on different makes it was found more or less impractical to make a statistical table of any value.

A report on oil tests which appeared in the Society of Automotive Engineers Journal said they showed that "as an average, on a 1,000-mile test with 13 makes of cars, oil consumption at 55 miles per hour was 6.9 times that of the same cars at 30 miles an hour."

company and machine gun company attack on front line "enemy" trenches.

Grandstands and bleacher seats at Amotan field will seat 4000 spectators and it is anticipated that every seat will be filled at the start of the pageant, which is being directed by its author, Dr. Thomas A. Griffith. An accompanying legend, written by Dr. Griffith and given over a public address system, will fully explain each scene of the drama as it unfolds.

Next in importance to the World War spectacle will be the annual convention parade scheduled for 5:30 p. m. Thursday, August 15, which will climax with the annual Old Fort Dalles Frolics, a pageant of pioneer days.

National Commander Frank N. Belgrano Jr. will review the annual parade and will make a public address at noon Thursday at the opening of the Convention.

On Friday, August 16, in addition to the business session of the convention, there will be a two hour afternoon program of special events and Indian tribal dances on Amotan Field, and at night the annual Drum corps contest for the state championship will begin at 7:30 on Amotan Field.

The Klamath Falls Drum corps, winners of last year's competition at Astoria, is coming to The Dalles determined to hold their title, while the Astoria Drum corps and Portland Post No. 1 Drum corps are said to be equally determined to wrest it from them.

Other drum corps to the number of 10 or 12, including the Anchor Girls corps of Astoria and the Legion Auxiliary Drum corps of Klamath Falls, will take part in the parade and the competitive and non-competitive exhibitions.

Job Hunters Flock to California

For weeks before the apple season opened in Sonoma county, California, families seeking employment were swarming into the state and crowding the auto camps. Many sold their ramshackle cars for a few dollars and were soon stranded. Here is a typical out-of-state family in the orchard-country.

WHEAT CONTRACT

conference in Washington early in July. In a general way the new contracts follow the plan of the old although some important innovations are included. One is that instead of there being a fixed rate of benefit payments, decided upon at the start of each crop year, the rate will be left more or less flexible to conform to changing market prices.

Under this plan approximately two-thirds of the prospective benefit payment will be made as soon as the contracts are approved. The second or final payment for each crop year will not be made until the market price record for that year is complete. The amount of the second payment will then be determined according to the amount needed to bring parity return to farmers for their allotments.

Payment To Be Made

Growers need not hesitate to sign the new contracts for fear of adverse decision on the constitutionality of the AAA, says Chester C. Davis, administrator. It is impossible to wait until after a decision by the supreme court to launch the new program, because fall grain for 1936 will be planted in the near future. He gives assurance, however, that any body signing a contract will be paid for compliance as long as it stays in force, regardless of whether the act is upheld or not.

Better Contract

Mr. Davis points out that the new amendments to the adjustment act, as passed by both senate and house, removed many of the objections to the processing tax provisions found by a federal circuit court which gave a divided decision against the act. He points out also that the new contracts permit cancellation by the secretary at the end of any year and allow the grower to withdraw at the end of the first two years if he so desires.

"Even if an adverse decision by the supreme court should materialize at some future time," Mr. Davis said, "the contract in its present form is admirably devised to protect both the farmers and the government."

What is more delicious than fresh corn with plenty of good butter! This vegetable is always a favorite with everyone and the butter is an important part of its preparation.

The season for corn is so short that it is well to take advantage of it and serve corn in some form nearly every day while it is available. Serving it on the cob with lots of delicious butter will probably remain most popular, especially for the younger members of the family.

Corn has a high energy value because of its starch content and the butter used on corn increases the energy value still more. Corn also has more protein than most vegetables, although its proteins are not sufficient in themselves but the milk or eggs added in cooking will make up for this deficiency. Sweet corn should be eaten within a short time after gathering as it deteriorates rapidly and loses much of its sweetness.

Corn removed from the cob, chopped green peppers added, and then sauted in butter brings out all the good corn flavor. Other interesting ways of serving corn are corn souffle, corn soup, corn fritters, corn puddings, or corn au gratin. Any of these combinations where milk and eggs are added to the corn make it the perfect main dish for a dinner or supper. These are ways in which leftover corn as well as fresh corn may be used:

- Corn Fritters
Two cups of fresh corn
Three fourths tsp salt
One eighth tsp of pepper
One beaten egg
Two tablespoons melted butter
One half cup milk
Two cups flour
One teaspoon baking powder
Chop corn coarsely, then add remaining ingredients. Beat well and drop by spoonfuls in deep hot fat heated. Fry until done turning frequently. Serves 4.
- Corn Souffle
Three tablespoons butter
Three tablespoons flour
