'Million Dollar Butler' Is Great Success

By Janet Wilcox
The high school play, "The Million Dollar Butler" was presented Friday evening to a good crowd. The play was successful from both the financial and the entertainment standpoint. Leighton Fields, as Boo Boo a little African boy, furnished the humor by jumping on ladies laps and rolling his eyes in a ridiculous fashion, while Marjorie Blake and Edwin Peters furnished the love interest. Betty Olds, a cook, and Keith Rhinehart, a butler, also added romance and heart throbs to the plot even though they came in covered with coal dust. Vere Pike, an ultra sophisticated actress, and her lawyer Willard Rolfe intensified the plot by suing Edwin for breach of promise. To outwit the scheming actress Ferd Stark pretended he was Edwin. Frances Fairchild aided Leighton in providing humor by wearing a monstrosity of a hat decorated by huge, colorful plumes of which she was extremely proud. Wanda Tiller and her little boy Le

If Old Mother Hubbard could take a peek into her cupboard today she would not find it bare for almost every kitchen planner has the "makings" for delicious waffles on her shelves - rich sour cream, butter, eggs, flour, leavening agent and salt.

Crispy browned waffles, with plenty of fresh butter, served with maple syrup and milk tastes good for breakfast, lunch or for the evening snack. Try hot melted butter and hot syrup with waffles and you will find instead of cooling the waffles by using cold butter and syrup they will be kept hot and crisp while you eat them.

Among the most tempting waffles are those made with sour cream. Served with sausage or bacon for a Sunday morning breakfast, or with fried chicken and gravy for a guest luncheon, they are equally good.

Chocolate or gingerbread waffles make delicious desserts. Serve hot chocolate waffles with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream. Hot gingerbread waffles are served with sweetened whipped cream, or whipped cream to which a little cottage cheese or soft creamed cheese has been added.

To cook waffles just right, pour about 1-3 cup of waffle batter over the heated iron. Close the iron and leave it until steam no longer escapes between the two halves. When done waffles should be crisp and brown and easily lifted from the iron with a fork.

Roy Spoor complicated the situation by causing the house to be quarantined.

The football boys defeated the Rufus team last Friday. The final score was 20 to 7. A third game between the two teams has been arranged to be held at the Wasco football field this coming Friday. The student body is planning on attending this game in a body if transportation can be arranged, as it is the last game of the season.

The volleyball game which was to take place with the Wasco team at Wasco has been postponed because the Wasco gym floor is being replaced by a hard wood one.

The Mermaid Tavern held a Halloween party at the school house Wednesday. The entertainment consisted of apple bobbing, fortune telling, and other equally quaint but exciting games. The refreshments were the high light of the evening. Delectable pumpkin pies with nuts and whipped cream, accompanied by apple cider were served the ravishing horde.

Bobby Rolfe, who has been missing from his accustomed place for a week due to illness has returned to school this week to the gratification of his teachers and classmates.

A Halloween assembly is to be held on Thursday from three to four o'clock. The Girls League will supply the entertainment. The program will be as follows: Marjorie Blake will act as Mistress of Ceremonies; Isabelle Fortner will give the opening address; Betty Olds will lecture on Etiquette for Halloween; Janet Wilcox will lecture on the topic "Superstition," Frances Fairchild will gaze into the crystal ball and give advice to the lovers; Wanda Tiller will give useful household hints; Katherine Burton will read a recipe for Pumpkin pie and Vere Pike will conduct a rally for the coming football game.

the tension of thinking about present state affairs by a recital of the old.

He pled for the retention of Willamette university on the present grounds and for the addition of more land by buying the north blocks in order to give the state a capitol room.

Bills are in the process of writing that will provide for an increased income tax to swell the general fund while the extra expenses incurred by the capitol building is in progress. It has a chance of getting by the legislation and rules committee which is more than can be said for most of the bills that have been thrown into the hopper.

There is some excitement in various quarters about the number of bills that have been introduced but when it is considered that these bills must run the gauntlet of the legislation and rules committee as well as the regular committee it may be assured that few will get by.

To date the two bills that have been reported out by the stiff and unbending rules committee are those of distinctly emergency nature. One had to do with the collection of fees from federal agencies which probably could not have been done anyway.

The bakery bill, the branch banking bill and many of the others will remain in the committee in all likelihood. Members are generally happy over this situation. Many of them are strengthening their political fences by introducing bills that will be popular back home in the hope and expectancy that the rules committee will not report them out. The coming election is important at this special session.

Information given the house has been very incomplete as far as telling the needs of the state capitol building is concerned. This situation led Representative Finland, backed by a large number of his colleagues, to ask that the information in the hands of the planning committee be given to members of the house. Clint Haight made a criticism on the floor of the house afterwards and was answered by Angel of Multnomah county who felt that his information was satisfactory.
