Veterans Ask For Homes To Invest Bonus In

Inquiries received at the local insuring office of the Federal Housing Administration give support to the belief of officials of the American Legion that a substantial part of the forthcoming bonus money will be invested in home properties.

The wives of a number of Veterans have called at the FHA office in the Park building to inquire about the complete home financing plan, their intention being to use the bonus money to purchase a building lot or as a down payment on an existing property.

Similar inquiries have been received by cooperating lending institutions in Portland and elsewhere in the state and realtors report an increasing number of home sales to Veterans who will turn over their bonus checks as initial payment as soon as the money is received. Under the terms of some contracts, monthly payments are started immediately, thus making actual possession possible pending formal transfer of the bonus amount.

According to the American Legion estimate, approximately 26 percent or $518,600,000 of the by won high score at bridge and C. T. Langley at chess.

"My name?" shouted the new guest. "Can't you see where I signed the register?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply, "that's what aroused my curiosity."

Mrs. Jones—I had the most terrible scare last night. I heard a noise in the middle of the night and turned on the light. There sticking out from underneath the bed was a pair of man's legs.

Mrs. Bones—Was it a burgler?

Mrs. Jones—Oh, no! It was my husband. He heard the noise first.

HI-WAYS TO HEALTH by ADA R. MAYNE OREGON DAIRY COUNCIL

This problem of feeding a man isn't as simple as it seems on the surface. If the men in your family eat heartily and with satisfaction anything and everything served and yet aren't overweight or suffering from chronic indigestion, then you may count yourself blessed. For you are the envy of the numerous worried wives who find the problem of husband feeding a large one.

The method of making a meal enjoyable varies with the type of man you have to feed. If he is overweight, it is wise to curb his appetite with a large succulent salad, served as the first course.

And be very miserly with sugars and fats in cooking and wary of such trimmings as rich jellies and gravies. But be careful to remember that a hungry man is not a happy one and make a specialty of meals that are filling without being fattening.

If the man is thin and nervous be as lavish as you like with cream, butter, sugar and other high calorie foods but be sure to serve the food in a tempting manner and see that the atmosphere at the dinner table is happy, even gay.

Perhaps the man takes a negative attitude toward good-for-you foods simply because too much has been said regarding their very important place in the diet. In that case a bit of careful disguising of the protective foods saves him and his disposition. A bit of onion, a dash of catsup, or Worcestershire sauce adds sophistication and develops the character of cream soups and cream or cheese sauces; fruit or tomato juice cocktail even where fruits and vegetables fail; fruit pies served with cheese are always welcome.

Build around this mannish dish the type of meal your husband requires but when it comes to educating a man to certain types of foods, remember that a woman's best weapons are subtlety and patience.

Control of Farm Land Planned For Future

Zoning of rural land, a movement that is rapidly spreading in the United States, will be thoroughly investigated for the state of Oregon by a special committee of experts under the direction of the Oregon state planning board, it was announced here Monday by Ormand R. Bean, chairman of the board.

The project, which is regarded as one of the most important in the board's program for the coming year, will be headed by E. L. Potter, agricultural economist, Oregon State college. He will be assisted by W. A. Schoenfeld, dean of the school of agriculture at the state college; C. J. Buck, regional forester, Portland; Sinclair A. Wilson, U. S. Forest Service, Portland; John B. Yeon, W. E. Finley, Portland, and J. W. Biggs of Burns.

Oregon, with its widely diversified climate, topography and soils, is in great need of rural land zoning, many experts declare. The state board study is expected to reveal whether or not measures should be passed by the next session of the legislature that would result in a more efficient use of the state's soil resources.

Such legislation would provide for classification of all lands except those now in forest, and while it would not interfere with present operations, it would prohibit transfer of rural land except for use as classified according to the laws. Such measures would prevent many futile attempts to farm sub-marginal areas, would provide grazing land where most needed, and would make for the most effective use of the soils.

Other members are expected to be added to the committee, and the board plans to have the recommendation on the project ready in March.

Rice—You claim a woman can't keep a secret but I've kept my age a secret since I was 25.

Stoff—Yes, but one of these days you'll simply have to tell it.

Rice—Oh, no. After a woman keeps a secret for 20 years she ought to know pretty well how to keep it.

Mrs. Morrissey—You used to say I was all the world to you.

Mr. Morrissey—Yeah, but I've learned my geography since.
