Something New In Mowers!

You may have thought that a machine so standard as the mower could not be improved much further. But after you examine the new McCormick-Deering No. 7 enclosed-gear mower we believe you will be convinced that there is something entirely new and different in mower construction.

With a automotive type of transmission, with all gears and driving mechanism, including the ratchets, compactly grouped inside a dust-tight gear case filled with oil . . . runs almost noiselessly. There is no loose play or chance for lost motion. Here, in short, is a mower with so many new and superior features of construction that all previous models seem obsolete in comparison with it.
