Electric Fence Recommended By Engineer

Use of electricity holds possibility in reducing fencing costs on the farm, believes Ivan Branton, assistant agricultural engineer at Oregon State college, who has investigated various kinds of electric fencing. When properly installed, Branton says, electric fencing is entirely safe for stock as well as human beings and lends itself particularly to pasture rotation use.

The advantage of electric fencing is that only one wire is needed and posts may be merely stakes driven in the ground three or four rods apart. Once cattle have been trained by contact with the slightly charged wire, they will leave it entirely alone. It has been found advantageous to string up wire in the barnyard where the cattle will learn about it before they are placed in the field where it is in regular use.

It is important, says Branton, to obtain equipment that is approved by the state electrical inspector and then install it strictly according to the directions of the manufacturer. It is not practical to try to connect electricity to ordinary fencing nor to connect any fence wire to an electric circuit without specific equipment designed for that purpose.

The single barbed wire ordinarily used for electric fencing is strung on insulators. Wood posts will not conduct the current from the wire when dry but during rainy weather they are likely to destroy its effectiveness. The operating cost of an electric fence is only a few cents a month when properly installed and, because of its rather temporary construction, may be moved from place to place.

In tests conducted at the Oregon experiment station, electric fence was found entirely practical for dairy cows even when a smooth wire was used, but a smooth wire was not effective for pigs unless it happens to touch the animals nose or ear. Branton believes that one heavily barbed wire, well insulated, would have been effective with hogs, sheep or goats which have considerable natural protection from the electric current.

U. S. National Reports Growth In Deposits

The United States National Bank which has a direct Branch in The Dalles, reports a continuation of its phenomenal growth, according to official statement issued to the Comptroller of Currency as of June 30. Deposits now stand at $105,236,505.83 and total resources $114,603,329.71, marking a growth in deposits of over ten and a half millions and a growth in resources of over twelve millions in the past twelve months, approximating its former gains of almost a million dollars a month.

Since its last statement in March, deposits have increased even in excess of that ratio, or a gain of almost five and a half millions.

Early in June the United States National increased its capital structure by the issuance of new stock to the amount of $750,000, making the present total in capital, surplus undivided profits and reserves of approximately nine million dollars.

C. R. Harding, manager of The Dalles Branch, also stated that it was gratifying to maintain this continued growth in deposits as it not only represented new business, but returning prosperity for old customers. "Another gratifying feature," stated Harding, "is the increase of loans and discounts, showing that there is a constantly increasing demand for money with which to conduct commercial and farm enterprises."

RAIN FALLS

The weather for the past week has been cool which brings delight to the farmers who can watch their wheat ripening slowly with a minimum of damage from drying or heat. Nights have been cool to cold. A sprinkle of rain fell in the Kent neighborhood Wednesday afternoon and enough to wet the sidewalks fell in Moro Thursday.

A large rain would have serious consequences in all but the south end of the county where it would do some good.
