Pacific Coast Has High Income Per Capita

More money jingles in the pockets of Pacific coast residents than in the pockets of residents of any other area in the United States, excluding the middle Atlantic states.

This is shown by the 1936 "Survey of Spending Power" made by "Sales Management" and released locally by the Oregon Mutual Life Insurance Co.

This survey answers the question of just how much money each community has to spend.

The publication defines spendable money income as the money actually paid out during the calendar year for goods and services produced and rendered, plus federal allotments, and money paid out of savings and surpluses of business institutions. It does not take into account inventory gains and losses.

In commenting on the survey, W. C. Schuppel, Executive Vice President of the Oregon Mutual Life Insurance Co., stated: "That the Pacific coast states, with an average annual spendable money income of $2800 per family, is far above the national average of $2111 and is second in the United States only to the middle Atlantic states. These facts should be a source of satisfaction to us all especially as the Pacific coast states are among the most recent to enter the industrial scene. Their resources have scarcely been tapped.

"It argues well for the future that the coast states should edge near the top while still so undeveloped. "Spendable money income has now recovered a trifle more than half of the loss since the boom days. Produced income in 1936 rose more sharply than income paid out.

During the worst years of the depression the excess of money paid out over money produced ran as high as nine billion dollars a year, made up of such factors as borrowings on Life insurance policies, with draws from savings, government loans, dividend and interest monies distributed but not earned from operations of the current year.

"The net result is an impressive increase for 1935 in spendable money income."

Now you can do away with the hot job of summer cooking—yet never do without a hot meal. Incredible? It's true. Science now gives you a new miracle of electricity—"Absent Cooking".

You place your entire meal—from meat to dessert—in a cold oven, set the time and temperature controls, and leave the house if you wish. Return just before dinner and your meal is ready. Even if your electric range doesn't have a time control, its temperature control will free you from all oven watching while your meal is cooking.

Another astonishing fact is that kitchen temperature is raised only about 1° during the cooking of an entire meal. Electric cooking is cool cooking!

Visit any dealer's or our nearest office today and see the wonderful new electric ranges on display.

Electric ranges are very reasonably priced. And you may purchase yours on convenient terms. The operating cost is very reasonable, too, with low-cost Pacific Power & Light Company electricity.
