TABER TALKS

At the present time, in certain circles, there is a tendency to laud to the extreme a temporary policy of farm relief.

Louis J. Taber, master of the National Grange said in his address at Sacramento to the national convention: "The solution of the farm problem requires that the interests of all be considered."

For one who has used former year books of the Department of Agriculture as a sleep inducer, the book made up this year will be a disappointment.

Mr. Tabor is principally concerned with the long time policy for American agriculture as he should be and as all farmers will have to be.

Neither can the American farmer expect lightning tax burdens as long as the national debt is $34,000,000,000 and still growing.

Fall oftentimes slips up on us so quietly in this county and it seems that this year one can sense the slow creep of fall weather.

lumpy as mid-June. But the first flow from waiting winter has been struck and experienced ones who intend to get out past sundown will hunt up the over coat and take it along.

Fall, like a feral cat, is surely creeping toward us with its biting chill and lashing winds.

And few will feel badly when the stroke is finally delivered. It is the waiting that is painful.

There is a friendliness about meeting around a fire that cannot be enjoyed when there is no need of fire.

U. S. D. A. EXPERTED For one who has used former year books of the Department of Agriculture as a sleep inducer, the book made up this year will be a disappointment.

What the department is doing to improve native varieties of plants and animals is told and the methods being used are explained.

In connection with the emergency methods of the AAA this is said: "Emergency adjustment contracts, as a matter of convenience had to be based on the past production of individual farmers."

The Sherman county station plant, breeders are given credit for their work with wheat varieties and a list is given of the varieties and hybrids they are working with at the present time, together with the characteristics they wish to perpetuate.

Probably few will read all of the 1187 pages, but there is good information in it to be gained without reading it all.

A peculiar thing about the presidential polls is that generally speaking rural people are voting for Landon.

An expert over in Austria wants to make a superman. Over here we have supermen every four years, if you don't believe it turn on the radio.

'Tis said the fortune tellers can tell one's fortune by the foam left in the beer glass.

STATEHOUSE GOSSIP

Agitation for a state owned office building in Portland was revived this week in a report to the board of control by Wallace S. Wharton, budget director, calling attention to the fact that the 39 state activities located in Portland are housed in 23 different office buildings scattered all over the city.

Oregon's 1936 crop of new lawyers was not quite as large as usual but it must have been of better quality judged by the fact that 61 out of the 87 applicants who took the bar examinations passed in spite of the higher standards recently imposed by the bar association.

Pension recipients were spared another experience with "rubber" checks this week when State Treasurer Holman arranged to take care of an overdraft in the pension fund until the State Relief Commission could cover an overdraft of nearly $30,000.

The legislative commission on governmental and administrative reorganization will meet here next week to hear a "progress" report from its sub-committee which has been working with a sub-committee of the state planning board on various phases of proposed changes in the set-up of the state government.

The new $50,000 dormitory at the state school for the blind is to be known as B. F. Irvine Hall in honor of the blind editor of the Oregon Journal who assisted materially in securing the appropriation for the building from the last legislature.

Male motorists respond more promptly to danger signals than do the female of the specie, according to tests conducted by the state highway commission at the state fair. Eighty per cent of the men who took the test were able to shove on the brake within three-fourths of a second after the flash of the red "stop" signal whereas only 55 percent of the women were able to measure up to this standard.

The Columbia fish fight between the seiners and gill-netters got into the supreme court this week when an appeal was taken from a decree by Circuit Judge Walker who refused to order the anti-seine bill kept off the November ballot.

Dragging brakes are sometimes caused by weak return springs on the brake shoes, or brake anchor pins that have not been properly lubricated.

How To Speak In Germany Told

By Eric W. Allen Dean of the University of Oregon School of Journalism

Hamburg, Germany.—In Oregon one says just what one thinks, or if one keeps still it is merely because he is too lazy or too polite to argue.

What is conversation like in a dictator country—where there is no freedom of speech, where no free newspapers, filled with all sorts of stories and interviews, are constantly suggesting there are two or more sides to all questions, and where there is an official doctrine with which it is more or less dangerous to disagree?

How should a foreigner, deeply habituated to the freedom of Oregon, conduct himself when entering this strange environment as a guest? The question grew more urgent as the time for actually entering Germany drew near.

The decision was reached that, limited only by the ordinary rules of courtesy and good feeling, the writer would, in Germany, say exactly what he thought and believed on any and all occasions.

The young Nazis take it in good part when told that they are poisonously wrong about the Jews, about the Nordic race, about the misdeeds of the American newspapers, (meaning principally their alleged unfairness to Germany), about war guilt, about violence, about liberty and about two thirds of the other things on which they are trained to hold fixed views and cultivate strong emotions.

For a native the story might be different. We sat next at the hotel in Copenhagen to a young German who had just escaped from a concentration camp in his native land. But one gathers that the art of disagreement and argument has not yet died out in Germany.

man here", expressions that will carry no particular meaning to snoopers.

In Italy, conversation is no longer very interesting even when full discretion is assured. The people no longer have interesting ideas—only the stale ones handed out by the state.

But Germany has had excellent universities and schools until recently, and in some limited respects they are still good. She has still an enormous body of highly educated, carefully trained, exceedingly conscientious and earnest intellectual workers.

After visiting six or ten German universities, the impression left was one of sadness. Their buildings are splendid, their professors, except for some recent political appointees, appeared to be men of the highest type—vigorous, keen scholars of great learning, abundant personality, unremitting industry and responsible, naturally honest mind.

It is not censorship alone, nor the necessity of substituting propaganda for inquiry that is weakening German education. Another influence is the lack of books and newspapers from abroad and the impossibility of indulging in foreign travel—never more necessary for the educator than today.

Most German Journalism professors conduct complete courses in "Public Opinion," yet only one was found who had even heard of the recent advance made in America in the art of measuring Public Opinion scientifically—the pages of mathematical weighted questionnaire material that now appear in full page of half page form in most large American Sunday papers.

foreign affairs, and people are found in conversation to have some thing of the acuteness and wide philosophical views about life and society that are common in free countries like Switzerland, Denmark, America, France and England.

In Other Days

From the Observer Sept. 28, 1917

A letter had been received by Sheriff McKean from Con Buckley giving his report on the arrival of the first contingent at Camp Lewis, all present and duly sober.

Harry Key has a bean crop that may be worth $120 per acre. They will go 600 to 700 pounds per acre and are worth 20 cents per pound.

Clarence Swarling and Ruth Christenson were married September 26 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Byers with Rev. John Robertson officiating.

Some 450 sacks of wheat were cut open and destroyed in the field of A. S. Johnson Saturday night. A man named Parates was tried before Justice Rudolf and bound over for the circuit court.

Henry Hennagin, C. B. Webb and Taylor Bergin were up this week on business from Multnomah county.

W. R. Fowler, long a resident of Rufus, died on the 10th and was buried in the Wasco cemetery.

NOTICE OF FINAL HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN: That Henry Yeackel, the administrator with the Will annexed of the Estate of Jacob Crocker, deceased, has filed in the County Court of Sherman County, Oregon, his Final Report and Account, and that Thursday, October 29th, 1936, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a. m. in the County Court room in the Passengers in the smoking compartment on my train were arguing about why railroad business is picking up.

A factory owner said it was because of free pick-up-and-delivery of less than car-load freight. The railroad calls for the LCL freight at shipper's door and delivers it to consignee's door.

A traveling salesman said it was because so many passenger and freight trains now run on faster schedules.

There was a school principal in the group and he said it was because train travel is so much cheaper for passengers. He said passenger fares are at the lowest point in history, with substantial reductions if you buy a round-trip ticket—and no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

One man, a farmer, said he liked something he could depend on, that's why he was traveling by train.

Another man, a newspaper reporter, said people were in favor of railroad travel because it is by far the safest. He quoted a lot of statistics from a book called, "Live and Let Live."

A banker we all know by name said railroad tax payments mean a lot in this state. We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.
