Many More Helped Through Red Cross

"The number of disaster victims assisted by the Red Cross during the fiscal year ended June 30 was more than four times the number aided in the previous twelve month period," Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, said in commenting on highlights of the annual report just issued. "Over 131,000 families were given food, clothing, shelter and medical care, and thousands of homes were rebuilt or repaired by the Red Cross to enable them to carry on."

Pointing to the many-sided problems created by the wide variety of types of disasters which occurred during the year, Admiral Grayson said, "The Red Cross sent hundreds of trained workers into 39 states to meet the many exigencies of catastrophes which included earthquake, epidemic, explosion, fire, hurricane, ice lock, landslide, refugee relief, shipwreck, tornado and typhoon. The Red Cross took charge at the scenes of 165 domestic disasters of major severity."

The report emphasized the marked value of Government-Red Cross cooperation when disaster strikes, giving as example the flight of Army bombing planes which dropped Red Cross food to marooned refugees at Renovo, Pennsylvania, during the Spring floods. More than 10,000 persons were rescued from the second floors of homes in Wilkes-Barre and Kingston through Coast Guard-Red Cross cooperation at the height of these same floods.

"Government agencies and relief groups were of invaluable assistance to Red Cross relief forces at all times," Admiral Grayson stated.

The complete resources of Red Cross leadership, training and disaster experience were brought into play by the Spring floods and tornadoes which took so heavy a toll of life and property in eastern and southern states this year, the annual report reveals. The Red Cross aided 77,000 families in 14 flooded states east of the Mississippi and 6,600 families in 6 tornado hit states south of the Mason-Dixon line in this one operation.

"Never before have as many metropolitan centers borne the brunt of attack by wind and water within a single year, challenging Red Cross preparedness and efficiency by so wide a variety of pressing human problems," Chairman Grayson said.

In its work of relief to disaster sufferers the Red Cross expended in excess of $5,200,000 for the year. The report points out that this figure does not include assistance given in 27 lesser disasters with a total of 2,000 persons aided, and adds that additional millions will be used to "clean up" Spring floods and tornadoes.

"Numerous local disaster situations occurring during the year were met by Red Cross chapter funds and manpower," Admiral Grayson said. "In each major relief operation undertaken the great army of Red Cross volunteers aided trained workers with the task of rehabilitating those without resources who had suffered losses."

"The Red Cross disaster relief service is one of many Red Cross activities supported by the American people through membership at the time of Roll Call, held each year from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving."

Red Cross Nurses Combat Disease on Wide Front

At the close of the fiscal year ended June 30, there were 873 Red Cross nurses bettering health conditions and caring for the sick in 604 communities. These Red Cross public health nurses cared for a total of 233,616 persons during the year and made more than a million visits on their behalf.

The annual report of the American Red Cross states further that these nurses cooperated with doctors in examining 671,057 school and pre-school children, with 342,361 physical defects found and curative treatment arranged in 209,080 cases.

In 979 Red Cross chapters 1,733 graduate nurses taught Red Cross home hygiene and care of the sick, issuing certificates to 53,126 persons completing the courses. In addition, 1,777 Red Cross reserve nurses were called upon during the year for disaster and epidemic control work.

Cancer Dies With Victim

Cancer is a disease of the living and ceases to exist with the death of the host. Perhaps no other disease of senescence is studied, analyzed and dreaded by the layman and medical scientist alike as is the disease process called cancer.

Early study was directed towards the morphological appearance of cancer in its various forms and stages as observed in clinical and postmortem study. Only the well advanced phases of cancer thus observed. Later, with the improved methods of surgical technique and procedure, cancer was removed in its earlier stages and hypotheses were advanced, based upon histological appearances of cancer tissue as it appeared in the host.

A study of the microscopic appearance of the tissue of the host structure surrounding cancer tissue gave evidence of various cytologic and tissue reactions which indicated an attempt on the part of the host to resist the invasion of the cancer cell growth. Lymphocytic infiltration, hyalinization and fibrous connective tissue formation were found to resist and to impede cancer spread in the host. On the other hand, a closer study of cancer cell development has demonstrated that cell virulence, or ability to undergo rapid mitosis, appears to be inversely proportional to the degree of differentiation toward the normal cell, which the cell group presents. In other words a well-differentiated cancer cell, approximating a degree of function with differentiation, usually represents a low grade of malignancy with slow and scattered mitosis, whereas a cell group with large nuclei and nucleoli, representing a little or no differentiation and showing anaplastic tendencies with marked hyperchromaticity, usually represents the highest grade of malignancy and rapid invasive tendencies.

The biochemical stimuli which induce both normal and abnormal cell growth represent the field of cancer investigation now in progress. The secret of the growth of the cancer cell and its deviation from the orderly growth stimuli of the normal cell, lies in the chemical structure of the cell and the biochemical medium from which it derives its nourishment, stimulant inhibitory factors.

Cancer is a disease of the living and until the biochemistry of the living cell is known in its relationship to varying chemical and glandular secretions in which it lives, the origin of cancer will not become known. W. H. Buermann, M. D.
