ON PROVINCIALISM

Last week in The Dalles at a public meeting the toastmaster praised Joe Carson, mayor of Portland, for his lack of provincialism...

Also within the same week there was in The Dalles criticism of the proposal to establish a free ferry at Maryhill for the stated reason that it might damage some plan or other now in the heads of certain citizens residing in that city.

In 1935 the Oregon legislature authorized the highway commission to buy, lease or operate free ferries across the Columbia to join federal highways.

Therefore we hope that prominent citizens of The Dalles, who pay their rent and buy their shirts with Sherman county money, will emulate the prominent citizens of Portland and come out in the public prints and rid themselves of their provincialism and state that they are all for the free ferry at Maryhill.

It was a great life he had led. Born poor, in early life he saw an opportunity to consolidate the timorous new oil companies that sprang up with the discovery of ways of using kerosene.

He began to give his money away to different funds and although he died with many millions to his credit there is no gainsaying the fact that he did immeasurable good with his fortune.

Some means should be devised to make the fighting labor unions settle their differences outside of working hours and thus cause less disturbance with the wheels of progress.

Mark Twain: Great humorist; greatest cussor. Any reason?

Both of both legs, both arms and both eyes in the same blast and miraculously he lived for weeks, not knowing that his arms and legs were gone because he could not feel their absence and believed every day that they would take off his bandages so that he could see again.

His fight to retain what was left of life was so dramatic, so hard continued that it enlisted the enthusiasm of his emotional fellows from Italy and when he at last succumbed to his wounds, he was given a stone to mark his resting place.

Now the railroad they helped to build is gone leaving only a narrow ledge along the turbulent stream. The cuts and tunnels that were crowded through the unyielding rock in so much haste are now merely scars on the unchanging hillsides.

Next Sunday will be Memorial Day. The living will then recall the lives of their departed and refresh the graves. Perhaps the little Italian is emblematic of all of us in that our memory is kept green by the respect and admiration we earn in our lives and that our works are fleeting and of brief memory.

When the sun is shining and the grass is getting greener every day and the wheat is stretching up to the sun and the halo of unaccustomed sunshine seems to make everything bright, it is easy to call the springtime the very best of the year.

Now a connoisseur of apple pies is surely one of those normal individuals who favors that acme of the culinary art when it is baked with fresh apples; with juicy apples whose juice boils up through the brittle crust and coagulates in pale colored jelly on top.

Of course an apple pie, of almost any kind is, or should be, a work of art. To be perfect it needs apples that are lately from the tree. A spring time apple pie serves its main purpose—we are speaking now of the apple pie as art and not as food—to remind the diner that fall is coming with its fresher pies and that they are worth living for.

Spring is occasionally windy and cold and summer will be hot and dusty and full of long and tiresome hours, but if we keep up hope and strength there will be fall and another round of apple pies, and there is something to live for despite the political situation and the price of bacon.

Andy of a famous radio team has been sued for divorce. We wondered if she wouldn't get tired of it too.

If Governor Martin gets by with continually telling the people of Oregon what he thinks in words they can't help but understand he will have started something worthwhile in politics.

Portland is to have a "Be Kind to People Week." It must be tough to live in a city that admits the need of such a holiday.

Maybe the city should have a lamb or two to clip the growing parking strips around town.

STATEHOUSE GOSSIP

Bassett in the ranks of the state's highest paid employes. At $350 a month Bassett's salary tops that of the state superintendent of public instruction or the state corporation commissioner...

Validity of the "good time" law passed by the recent legislature has been brought into question through a United States supreme court opinion holding that a similar law passed by the Washington legislature could not be made retroactive.

Rural residents who have been draining their sewage into roadside ditches are being warned by the state highway commission that this practice constitutes a violation of a state law passed in 1925 imposing a penalty of $100 fine and 30 days imprisonment.

Only seven per cent of the $2,500,000 authorized for the new capitol building has been spent so far according to records in the state department.

Two million dollars in additional federal funds will be available for road work in Oregon next year if appropriation measures now before Congress are passed.

The state is about to negotiate the biggest deal in cascara bark in the history of the west. Bids are being invited on the bark contained in the 70,000 acre Elliott park in western Lane and Douglas counties.

There was one piece of pie left from the noon meal on the table, and Mrs. Powell divided it between Helen and Buddy.

Almost 24,000 cars involved in accidents on Oregon highways in 1936 were in faulty condition, Oregon State Motor association statistics show.

In Other Days

From the Observer May 31, 1918

From the Observer May 29, 1908

Audra and Glad Watkins entertained their little school mates with a very pleasant party at auntie McDaniels, Wednesday evening.

Messrs. Berrian and Stuart took 25 grand trout from Des Chutes river, at Rohr Villa on the 24th of which one measured 17 inches, and the others were nearly as large.

Playing ball on Grass Valley diamonds on the 21th Johnny Shear came off with a broken ankle. He is a popular young man with the boys, who immediately made up a $45 purse and the days gate receipts for his benefit.

John Strahl is enlarging the farm residence of F. A. Sayers to nearly double its former capacity of living rooms.

TODAY'S QUOTE

"Look at any rural community with well kept homes, good churches and schools and a general appearance of being a place in which you would like to live, and you will find that the farmers there have learned how to make a profitable business out of farming. Those are the kind of communities that you and I want to help build."

DANGER AFTER DARK

Deaths from automobiles colliding at night increased 37 per cent from 1930 through 1936, while deaths from daylight crashes decreased 12 per cent during this period, figures from the Oregon State Motor association reveal.
